

D. W. CHERRY ON CITY COMMISSION

IMPEACH OKLAHOMA GOVERNOR

SUSPEND JOHNSTON AUTOMATICALLY AS CHARGES ARE VOTED

Incompetency And Corruption Are Among Charges

OKLAHOMA CITY, Jan. 19. — Governor Henry S. Johnston was impeached today on five charges voted by the Oklahoma house of representatives.

The five articles, alleging incompetency and corruption in office and specifically charging Johnston illegally appropriated or diverted state funds, were voted in a lengthy session ending at 1 a. m.

The house then adjourned until 1:30 p. m. Monday, when attempts will be made to prefer five other impeachment articles drawn by house investigators.

The governor automatically will be suspended from office Monday when the state senate receives the charges. W. J. Holloway, lieutenant governor, will fill his office pending Johnston's trial by the senate court of impeachment.

Under constitutional law the governor is impeached as soon as the impeachment charges are voted against him by the house.

The official vote on the resolution was 78 for, 22 against; 4 absent.

The impeachment was based on article number 3 of the charges prepared by a special house committee which conducted an investigation.

Articles number 3 charged Governor Johnston with unlawful issuance of deficiency certificates for the banking department and creating the position of assistant attorney, law clerk and stenographer for the years 1927 and 1928.

The impeachment resolution charges generally were specific except for the tenth which charges general incompetency.

Among the remaining articles of impeachment charges of diversion and misappropriation of funds; unlawful expenditures; unauthorized authorization of interference by militia with orderly sessions of the state assembly; attempts to intimidate witnesses called to testify before the house investigating committee; issuance of pardon and restoration of citizenship without study of criminal records, and unlawful issuance of deficiency certificates to continue state issues commission for which legislature had refused to make appropriations.

Governor Johnston, in an interview with newspapermen, after his impeachment had been voted, declared the charges voted against him were "not even technical" and that he was "crystal clear" of any wrong.

He asserted that the house by its action had impeached itself. "Every man who voted those charges believes and most of them know that I have never done a wrong thing in my life," he said.

"Any man who stuffs himself by voting caucus action to adjudge the guilt or innocence of his fellow man stands himself impeached."

"I feel something just bubbling over within me because I know that I have done nothing wrong."

Similar charges brought against Governor Johnston by the 1927 house were quashed in the senate. County Attorney George Callahan announced he would investigate the charges of incompetency and official corruption which the house preferred against the governor and that if the evidence was strong enough he would prosecute Johnston in the criminal courts.

BUCKLEY OFFICE IN GOOD SHAPE, FOUND

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 19.—State Treasurer Bert B. Buckley's office "is in excellent shape," State Auditor Joseph P. Tracy announced today after auditing the department's books.

Buckley requested the audit recently following his indictment on a federal charge of conspiring to offer a bribe for the protection of the manufacture of beer.

Tracy in his report of the audit said:

"The result of this examination shows that Buckley has faithfully accounted for all public funds and securities of which he is official custodian."

Buckley is scheduled to go on trial the latter part of this month. Two men indicted with him—John L. Schrimper, Cincinnati attorney, and Joseph Sperber, Cincinnati brewmaster—have pleaded guilty.

The three were accused of attempting to bribe John Eckhardt, assistant chief of federal prohibition enforcement here.

NEW STATE WELFARE DIRECTOR TO PROBE JETT BOY'S DEMISE

Griswold To Visit
Marietta To Get Information.

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 19.—A searching investigation into the death of Hamilton Jett, 17, of Marietta, at the Boys Industrial School in Lancaster Jan. 9, will be started next week, Hal H. Griswold, new state welfare director, announced today.

Griswold said he will go to Marietta the latter part of next week to hear testimony.

Later he will hear witnesses in Lancaster.

His decision was reached after a conference with O. S. Creighton, member of the general assembly representing Washington County in which Marietta is located.

Creighton submitted to the welfare director a complete record of a coroner's inquest held after the boy's body was taken home from the Lancaster institution.

The report contained a statement by the boy's mother, Flora Jett, that he was brutally treated by pneumonia, from which he died.

It contains her statement that the boy was beaten for trying to escape and afterwards hit in the face by an officer in charge of a squad being disciplined.

The report of an autopsy which indicated there were wounds and bruises on the boy's back also was shown to Griswold.

The welfare director issued the following statement:

"I propose to make a most searching investigation of the whole affair. It is only fair to the parents of the boy and to the officers of the school that all uncertainty be removed. No one will be shielded and no one will be persecuted."

"I propose to go to Marietta at some time during the latter part of next week to take the testimony under oath of any witness who knows anything of the matter. I am doing this to give the interested parties the opportunity of putting their case before me without the expense of a trip to Columbus."

"I shall also conduct a hearing at Lancaster and permit the officers to make their side of the story a matter of record."

"After the merits of this particular case have been disposed of I shall take up the broader question of the policy of the school with reference to treatment of inmates."

Three Killed And Many Injured At Maunie, Ill.; Second Storm Hits Kentucky; One Death Reported In Ohio.

A terrific windstorm, now diminishing in force, swept northeastward across Lake Erie today after leaving a trail of death and heavy property damage in its path across four middlewestern states.

The storm, which at times reached a velocity of seventy-five miles an hour, originated in southern Missouri yesterday afternoon, whipped across southern Illinois, Indiana and Kentucky and after striking lightly in several Ohio cities was believed to be passing out over the lake.

The toll of known dead stood at eleven today. Restoration of communication in the stricken areas, however, was expected to increase the number of victims. The number of injured was unestimated.

Red Cross aid was being dispatched to the town of Maunie, Ill., which was directly in the path of the storm. An emergency call for twenty-four doses of anti-tetanus serum was received at St. Louis headquarters. The request said Maunie medical authorities were unable to care for the large number of injured. Three persons were killed.

The known dead:

Dorothy Hanley, 12, Maunie, Ill. Bernice Tucker, 10, Maunie, Ill. Mrs. Amos Newman, Maunie, Ill. Marjorie Hargraves, 4, Cape Girardeau, Mo.

Buddy Hargraves, 3, Cape Girardeau, Mo. Mrs. Mary Nolan, 65, Fort Brant, Ind.

William Thrasher, 43, Louisville, Ky. Roy Litter, 21, Milton, Ky. Clinton Mahoney, 24, Milton, Ky.

Three persons were killed at Maunie where two schoolhouses, a grain elevator and several residences were destroyed.

A three-story frame schoolhouse for white children was leveled to the ground. The bodies of Bernice Tucker, 10, and Dorothy Hanley, 12, were removed from the wreckage. The principal, Charles Moore, and a teacher, Mrs. Ray Roser, and twelve students were injured. About thirty pupils were absent with influenza.

Authorities said the fact that the majority of the pupils were at the blackboard when the storm struck saved a heavier death toll. The vacant seats were crushed under the falling timbers. Near the blackboard the wall supported the timbers and saved the children. The other school was vacant. Glen Ervin, 10, and Myrtle Rose, 10, were the most seriously injured of

HARRY COULBY, ONE TIME "GREAT LAKES CZAR" IS SUMMONED

Millionaire Dies In London Near His Birth-place.

LONDON, Jan. 19.—Harry Coulby, one time "czar of the Great Lakes," was found dead in his bed at the Ritz Hotel late Thursday night.

Physicians who examined the body said he apparently had died from a heart attack while sleeping. Coulby had arranged to sail today for the West Indies enroute to the United States.

CLEVELAND, Jan. 19.—Harry Coulby, one time "czar of the Great Lakes," will be buried in his native land, England.

Surrounded by all the luxuries available to a millionaire, he died Thursday at London, England, just a few miles from the place he left forty-five years ago, a boy of seventeen in search of adventure.

Coulby will be buried in the church yard of his native Claypole.

In his quest of a new life, he worked his way to Cleveland and the Great Lakes. He became associated with Col. John Hay, went to Washington with him when Hay was secretary of state and then returned here to work for Samuel Mather, ore and iron merchant.

It was from that position that he worked his way to the point where his control over lake shipping was such as to win him the title "czar of the Great Lakes."

After shooting Gullio the men fired at Joseph Roneo, an employee of Gullio's, who leaped through the rear door and escaped.

One of the men under arrest, according to Sheriff Ferry, is head of the liquor ring but he is not believed to have participated in the killings.

Ferry believes the gunmen intended to kill Mrs. Gullio and Roneo to prevent them from telling what they knew concerning the ring's operations.

The first shock was light, and enabled people to flee into the streets, but a series of successive quakes followed which shook down their homes.

STORM CAUSES DAMAGE HERE; UTILITIES HIT

Light, Telephone And Traction Suffer; Streams Flooded

Two typically summer storms, torrential rains, accompanied by high wind and lightning, flooded Greene County streams Friday afternoon and evening, temporarily crippled light, power and telephone lines, and interfered with traction, railroad and automobile traffic.

The Dayton Power and Light Company was the heaviest sufferer, but E. H. Heathman, Greene County manager said that he expected everything to be back in good condition by noon Saturday or shortly after noon.

Crews worked all night repairing damage due to broken poles, lightning and the rain. For three hours Friday night from six until nearly nine, homes in the south end of the city were without lights, due to trouble which originated near the Barnett lumber mill on Washington St., where wires came in contact during the evening storm. Candles and flashlights were put into use while families partook of their evening meals, and attempted to read the evening paper by their flickering gleams.

Farm lines in Greene County toward Washington C. H. and Wilmington were crippled when poles were blown down in the southern part of the county, near Spring Valley, and in the vicinity of Waynesville lightning caused trouble. Several farm lines were out for about two hours on that account. The company never experienced locally more trouble from a summer electrical storm, Mr. Heathman said.

Telephone service in Xenia and parts of the county was interfered with. A few poles were blown down near Jamestown, and a number of telephones were out over the city and county due to trouble caused by the rain and lightning.

The trouble was not of a serious nature, company officials said. Telegraph lines reported no damage in the county.

Traction service was temporarily crippled when power went off during the storms. Service on the Dayton and Xenia line was off for about two hours in the afternoon on that account. In the evening

ARREST FOUR AFTER COUPLE MURDERED; BLAME LIQUOR FEUD

Pair Posing As Friends Shoot Two To Death

RAVENNA, O., Jan. 19.—Four men were under arrest here today in connection with the killing of Pete Gullio and his wife Lena who were shot to death in their home last night.

The double murder culminated a feud in the inner ranks of a tri-county bootlegging ring, according to Sheriff J. R. Ferry who said members of the ring were quarreling over price-cutting.

The Gullios were killed by two men who, posing as friends, were admitted to their home last night. Hands were shaken all around, then the men, without warning, backed against a wall and began firing.

Gullio was shot six times. His wife died later in a hospital after naming one of the gunmen. She did not recognize the other.

After shooting Gullio the men fired at Joseph Roneo, an employee of Gullio's, who leaped through the rear door and escaped.

One of the men under arrest, according to Sheriff Ferry, is head of the liquor ring but he is not believed to have participated in the killings.

Ferry believes the gunmen intended to kill Mrs. Gullio and Roneo to prevent them from telling what they knew concerning the ring's operations.

ELECTED TO VACANCY AT SPECIAL SESSION; BABB ELECTED MAYOR

Karl Babb Elected To Mayor's Job At Saturday Meeting; Both Selections Unanimous; Six Names Are Considered.

(BULLETIN)
Karl R. Babb was elected mayor of Xenia, succeeding John W. Prugh, resigned, at a special meeting of city commission, Saturday afternoon.

Babb will serve as mayor until his term as commissioner expires December 31, 1929. The selection was unanimous, with Babb not voting. His name was placed in nomination by E. E. Lighthiser.

David W. Cherry, Xenia furniture dealer and prominent business man, was unanimously elected a member of City Commission to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of John W. Prugh at a special commission meeting Friday afternoon. He will serve out Prugh's unexpired term, which ends December 31, 1929.

Six names were presented for consideration by commissioners for the vacancy, including Frederick Flynn, Dr. J. A. Yoder, Dr. F. M. Chambliss, O. A. Spahr, R. D. Adair and D. W. Cherry.

Without discussion, Commissioner Babb nominated Cherry, Commissioner Lighthiser seconded the motion and an unanimous vote resulted.

Commissioners engaged in the task of selecting a successor to Prugh as mayor of Xenia, passed most of the stormy session without action and transacted only half of its scheduled business — that of naming the new commissioner.

As far as appointing a mayor was concerned, the conference developed into an endurance contest and ended in adjournment of the session until 1:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon, when the commission was scheduled to go into session and thrash out the mayor question.

Prugh's resignation took effect Saturday and Mr. Cherry was scheduled to qualify as commissioner by giving $1,000 bond and taking the oath of office.

The crux of the mayor's problem is that three affirmative votes, or a majority vote of the five commissioners, is necessary to appoint a mayor.

Karl Babb, one of the senior members of the commission, whose term expires December 31, 1929, was expected to be named mayor of the city Saturday afternoon, but the commission could only muster two votes in his favor at the special session Friday. He has no opposition, however, for the position.

Commissioners at the start of the meeting found it difficult to even start the ball rolling for appointing a mayor.

This was the situation. Only four commissioners remained to participate in the selection of a mayor from one of their number. Commissioners Karl Babb, Jacob Kany and E. E. Lighthiser were prospective candidates for the post. When

MAROONED FAMILY CARRIED TO SAFETY IN GALLANT RESCUE

Flood Waters Menace Ohio Following Rain-storms.

CLEVELAND, O., Jan. 19.—Six persons, marooned in their homes by flood waters, that followed Friday night's deluge of rain, were rescued early today.

Working with a one-oared boat, volunteers braved the angry current of the Chagrin River, at Willoughby to rescue Grant Downing, a farmer, his wife Julia and their children, Grace, 3, and Dorothy, 1-2.

Cleveland firemen from a west side engine house brought two caretakers from their cottage on picnic grounds in "The Flats" after water had driven them to the roof.

The storm that broke over northern Ohio late Friday drenched Cleveland in the heaviest rainfall ever recorded in January, measuring two inches. Thunder, lightning and a high wind, which attained an estimated velocity of fifty miles an hour, accompanied the rain. The mercury rose to 61, a new high for January but colder weather was predicted for today.

At midnight, the flood crept into the Downing house. The children were put high on the table and Downing opened his door and began firing his shotgun. A neighbor, hearing the shots, called police.

Winfield Scott, a jockey, with one end of a rope, attempted to swim to the house, across 500 feet of rushing, swirling water, eight feet deep. Police restrained him. Then a boat with only one oar was found. Scott volunteered to make the trip in that scow.

For half an hour Scott battled the angry water, that tore at his boat. When he finally reached the house the children were handed out through an upstairs window. He took them to shore and then returned for the parents. The rescue took two hours.

The two caretakers at Jennings Road picnic grounds, John Shunk, 60, and Steven Levandowski, 62, were on the roof of their abode when firemen took them to safety. Firemen were forced to row across a 150 foot gap of swirling water six to eight feet deep.

The cottage was located near where Big Creek pours into the Cuyahoga River. The river left its banks, flooding a road with six feet of water in which several autos were caught.

In Akron, windows in downtown shops were broken and merchandise suffered as a result. Trees were uprooted.

Near Ashland, O., the roof of the C. J. Latter home was torn off. The barn was blown down and several head of livestock were killed.

At Mansfield, O., Mrs. Albert Steed, 55, was instantly killed while at the telephone during the storm. Lightning struck nearby and the woman was electrocuted. Sections of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad south of here, were washed out and trains held up for several hours.

The storm was general throughout the northern section of Ohio. The arrival of colder weather at fore high winds, deluged almost every section of the state.

Teh arrival of colder weather at midnight, halted the rainfall.

PARIS, Jan. 19.—Marshal Ferdinand Foch, suffering from a complication of heart attacks and uremia, passed an "excellent" night, Mme. Foch told the United Press today.

ETHEL IS TARDY

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—A warrant for $10,000 against Ethel Barrymore, stage star, has been filed by the state tax commission which seeks payment of state income taxes from 1922 to 1927.

Miss Barrymore said she knew nothing of the judgment and that she owned no property in New York.

The steamship Jose Felix Rivas left last night carrying supplies and relief equipment.

Reports from Caracas said that the Moie was destroyed by an earthquake Thursday, but no casualties were given. The town is about forty miles from Cumana.

The entire city, the home of approximately 12,000 people, was leveled by the shocks, which lasted ten minutes.

The first shock was light, and enabled people to flee into the streets, but a series of successive quakes followed which shook down their homes.

STORM CAUSES DAMAGE HERE; UTILITIES HIT

Light, Telephone And Traction Suffer; Streams Flooded

Two typically summer storms, torrential rains, accompanied by high wind and lightning, flooded Greene County streams Friday afternoon and evening, temporarily crippled light, power and telephone lines, and interfered with traction, railroad and automobile traffic.

The Dayton Power and Light Company was the heaviest sufferer, but E. H. Heathman, Greene County manager said that he expected everything to be back in good condition by noon Saturday or shortly after noon.

Crews worked all night repairing damage due to broken poles, lightning and the rain. For three hours Friday night from six until nearly nine, homes in the south end of the city were without lights, due to trouble which originated near the Barnett lumber mill on Washington St., where wires came in contact during the evening storm. Candles and flashlights were put into use while families partook of their evening meals, and attempted to read the evening paper by their flickering gleams.

Farm lines in Greene County toward Washington C. H. and Wilington were crippled when poles were blown down. In the southern part of the county, near Spring Valley, and in the vicinity of Waynesville, lightning caused trouble. Several farm lines were out for about two hours on that account. The company never experienced locally more trouble from a summer electrical storm, Mr. Heathman said.

Telephone service in Xenia and parts of the county was interfered with. A few poles were blown down near Jamestown, and a number of telephones were out over the city and county due to trouble caused by the rain and lightning. The trouble was not of a serious nature, company officials said. Telegraph lines reported no damage in the county.

Traction service was temporarily crippled when power went off during the storms. Service on the Dayton and Xenia line was off for about two hours in the afternoon on that account. In the evening

Millionaire Dies In London Near His Birthplace.

LONDON, Jan. 19.—Harry Coulby, one time "czar of the Great Lakes" will be buried in his native land, England.

Surrounded by all the luxuries available to a millionaire, he died Thursday at London, England, just a few miles from the place he left forty-five years ago, a boy of seventeen in search of adventure.

Coulby will be buried in the church yard of his native Claypole.

In his quest of a new life, he worked his way to Cleveland, and the Great Lakes. He became associated with Col. John Hay, went to Washington with him when Hay was secretary of state and then returned here to work for Samuel Mather, ore and iron merchant.

It was from that position that he worked his way to the point where his control over lake shipping was such as to win him the title "czar of the Great Lakes."

After shooting Gull the men fired at Joseph Renshaw, an employee of Gull's, who leaped through the rear door and escaped.

One of the men under arrest, according to Sheriff Perry, is head of the liquor ring but he is not believed to have participated in the killings.

Perry believes the gunmen intended to kill Mrs. Gull and Renshaw to prevent them from telling what they knew concerning the ring's operations.

KARL R. BABB

D. W. Cherry, well-known Xenia business man, was elected member of the city commission at a special session of that body Friday afternoon to succeed J. W. Prugh, resigned.

Karl R. Babb became Mayor Babb at another special session Saturday afternoon when he was unanimously elected to the office previously held by Mayor Prugh.

ARREST FOUR AFTER COUPLE MURDERED; BLAME LIQUOR FEUD

Pair Posing As Friends Shoot Two To Death

RAVENNA, O., Jan. 19.—Four men were under arrest here today in connection with the killing of Pete Gull and his wife Lena who were shot to death in their home last night.

The double murder culminated a feud in the inner ranks of a tri-county bootlegging ring, according to Sheriff J. R. Perry who said members of the ring were quarreling over price-cutting.

The Gulls were killed by two men who, posing as friends, were admitted to their home last night. Hands were shaken all around, then the men, without warning, backed against a wall and began firing.

Gull was shot six times. His wife died later in a hospital after naming one of the gunmen. She did not recognize the other.

After shooting Gull the men fired at Joseph Renshaw, an employee of Gull's, who leaped through the rear door and escaped.

One of the men under arrest, according to Sheriff Perry, is head of the liquor ring but he is not believed to have participated in the killings.

ELECTED TO VACANCY AT SPECIAL SESSION; BABB ELECTED MAYOR

Karl Babb Elected To Mayor's Job At Saturday Meeting; Both Selections Unanimous; Six Names Are Considered.

(BULLETIN)
Karl R. Babb was elected mayor of Xenia, succeeding John W. Prugh, resigned, at a special meeting of city commission, Saturday afternoon.

Babb will serve as mayor until his term as commissioner expires December 31, 1929. The selection was unanimous, with Babb not voting. His name was placed in nomination by E. E. Lighthiser.

David W. Cherry, Xenia furniture dealer and prominent business man, was unanimously elected a member of City Commission to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of John W. Prugh at a special commission meeting Friday afternoon. He will serve out Prugh's unexpired term, which ends December 31, 1929.

Six names were presented for consideration by commissioners for the vacancy, including Frederick Flynn, Dr. J. A. Yoder, Dr. F. M. Chambliss, O. A. Spahr, R. D. Adair and D. W. Cherry.

Without discussion, Commissioner Babb nominated Cherry, Commissioner Lighthiser seconded the motion and an unanimous vote resulted.

Commissioners engaged in the task of selecting a successor to Prugh as mayor of Xenia, passed most of the stormy session without action and transacted only half of its scheduled business—that of naming the new commissioner.

As far as appointing a mayor was concerned, the conference developed into an endurance contest and ended in adjournment of the session until 1:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon, when the commission was scheduled to go into session and thrash out the mayor question.

Prugh's resignation took effect Saturday and Mr. Cherry was scheduled to qualify as commissioner by giving $1,000 bond and taking the oath of office.

The crux of the mayor's problem is that three affirmative votes, or a majority vote of the five commissioners, is necessary to appoint a mayor.

Karl Babb, one of the senior members of the commission, whose term expires December 31, 1929, was expected to be named mayor of the city Saturday afternoon, but the commission could only muster two votes in his favor at the special session Friday. He has no opposition, however, for the position. Commission at the start of the meeting found it difficult to even start the ball rolling for appointing a mayor.

This was the situation. Only four commissioners remained to participate in the selection of a mayor from one of their number. Commissioners Karl Babb, Jacob Kany and E. E. Lighthiser were prospective candidates for the post. When

Flood Waters Menace Ohio Following Rainstorms.

CLEVELAND, O., Jan. 19.—Six persons, marooned in their homes by flood waters, that followed Friday night's deluge of rain, were carried to safety in spectacular rescues early today.

Working with a one-oared boat, volunteers braved the angry current of the Cuyahoga River, as valiantly to rescue Grant Downing, a farmer, his wife Julia and their children, Grace, 3, and Dorothy, 1 1/2.

Cleveland firemen from a west side engine house brought two caretakers from their cottage on picnic grounds in "The Flats" after water had driven them to the roof. The storm that broke over northern Ohio late Friday drenched Cleveland in the heaviest rainfall ever recorded in January, measuring two inches. Thunder, lightning and a high wind which attained an estimated velocity of fifty miles an hour, accompanied the rain. The mercury rose to 61, a new high for January, but colder weather was predicted for today.

At midnight, the flood crept into the Downing house. The children were put high on the table and Downing opened his door and began firing his shotgun. A neighbor, hearing the shots, called police.

Winifred Scott, a jockey, with one end of a rope attempted to swim to the house, across 500 feet of rushing, swirling water, eight feet deep. Police restrained him. Then a boat with only one oar was found. Scott volunteered to make the trip in that.

For half an hour Scott battled the angry water that tore at his boat. When he finally reached the house the children were handed out through an upstairs window. He took them to shore and then returned for the parents. The rescue took two hours.

The two caretakers at Jennings Road picnic grounds, John Shurk, 60, and Steven Levandowski, 62, were on the roof of their abode when firemen took them to safety. Firemen were forced to row across a 150 foot gap of swirling water six to eight feet deep.

The cottage was located near where Big Creek pours into the Cuyahoga River. The river left its banks, flooding a road with six feet of water in which several autos were caught.

In Akron, windows in downtown shops were broken and merchandise suffered as a result. Trees were uprooted.

Near Ashland, O., the roof of the C. J. Latter home was torn off, the barn was blown down and several head of livestock were killed.

At Mansfield, O., Mrs. Albert Stodd, 50, was instantly killed while at the telephone during a storm. Lightning struck nearby and the woman was electrocuted. Sections of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad south of here, were washed out and trains held up for several hours.

The storm was general throughout the northern section of Ohio. The arrival of colder weather at force high winds, deluged almost every section of the state.

The arrival of colder weather at midnight, halted the rainfall.

CHAS. E. HUGHES

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—President-elect Hoover has invited Charles E. Hughes to become his secretary of state. The Washington Daily News, a Scripps-Howard newspaper, stated today. The News said Hoover had written a letter to Hughes inviting him into the cabinet and was now awaiting a reply.

Hughes served as secretary of state under Harding and Coolidge, from March 4, 1921 to 1925. He headed the American delegation to the Pan American conference at Havana last winter and was chief delegate to the recent Pan American conciliation conference here.

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—Charles Evans Hughes has not yet received a letter from President-Elect Hoover.

ELECTED TO VACANCY AT SPECIAL SESSION FRIDAY AFTERNOON

nominations for mayor were opened, neither of these three men could nominate himself and S. M. McKay, fourth commissioner, since he is president of the commission, was prevented by law from making the nomination.

After more than five minutes of stony silence upon the part of the city fathers, Commissioner Kany finally yielded and placed the name of Karl Babb in nomination. In order to obtain a second to the nomination, President McKay surrendered the chair to Commissioner Babb temporarily, and himself seconded it.

Then the matter was put to a vote. Four commissioners were available to vote and three votes were necessary to appoint. McKay and Kany voted for Babb, but Lightshiser refused to vote and Babb wouldn't vote for himself, so no appointment was made.

Commissioners expected that when Cherry qualified as commissioner Saturday, the third and necessary vote to appoint Babb as mayor would be obtained. It was discovered that the new commissioner could not qualify Friday since Prugh's resignation did not become effective until midnight.

After a mayor is selected, the question of what salary he is to receive will be taken up. Prugh, at the time he resigned, received $1,650 a year, which Commissioners Kany and Lightshiser, at least, assert is excessive for the amount of work and time involved in the administration of the office.

Commissioner Kany had an amendment to the city ordinance reducing the salary of the mayor drawn up and was all ready to introduce it, slicing the salary to $1,000.

However, the commission expects to go before the state legislature soon with a bill providing for restoring a police court or municipal court for Xenia, replacing the present mayor's court, and Kany said that he is in favor of making no change in the present mayor's salary out of courtesy to Prugh's successor, providing the commission carries out its announced intention of abolishing the mayor's court.

If a police court or municipal court is established in Xenia, Kany said that no matter who is appointed mayor at this time, his tenure of office would only last for the remainder of the year.

Although it was considered the proper legal procedure to appoint a mayor and settle the question of his salary afterward, Commissioner Lightshiser took the view that the salary question should be thrashed out first.

He proposed that each commissioner who was a candidate for the post, submit to the commission what salary he would be willing to serve for as mayor. It was his suggestion that the bids be tabulated and the low bidder be appointed mayor to serve until a police court or mayor's court is established.

Because of his opinions on the subject, Lightshiser refused to participate in the selection of a mayor.

City Solicitor J. A. Finney pointed out to the commission that it would be possible to obtain legislative action on a bill providing for a police court or municipal court for Xenia at the present session.

The judge of this court would be an elective office and Xenia voters would elect a judge for the court on a non-partisan ticket at the fall election. The commission, it is believed, would have the power to stipulate in the bill passed by the legislature the amount of salary the judge should receive in conformity with the responsibility involved.

To make the plan water-tight, the commission would probably pass an amendment to the city charter, repealing the section granting judicial powers to the mayor.

Solicitor Finney declared that if a municipal court is established, the presiding judge would have jurisdiction in civil as well as criminal cases and it would be a more complicated procedure to obtain enactment of such a bill.

On the other hand, commissioners feel that a police court in which the judge has only jurisdiction in criminal cases and the fee system is abolished, would better suit local needs.

The judge of a police court would receive a straight salary fixed by the commission, half of which would be paid by the county and half by the city. The county would bear half the expense since all cases imposed by the judge in criminal cases and the fee system is abolished, would better suit local needs.

If a police court is established here it will be similar to the old municipal court declared unconstitutional by the Ohio Supreme Court and abolished in 1925. The only difference is that the judge of the court will be elected by the voters instead of being appointed by the commission.

CHILD IS AWARDED JUDGMENT FOR $150

For injuries received in an auto accident at Third and Monroe Sts., August 29, 1928, Betty Rose McKay, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. P. McKay, E. Second St., was awarded $150 damages, the full amount sought, against Brant U. Bell, Hill and Columbus Sts., in Common Pleas Court Friday.

The damage action was filed Friday and judgment was confessed the same day.

The suit was filed on behalf of Betty McKay by Daisy McKay, her mother.

The petition charged that the girl sustained an injury to her leg in addition to minor cuts and bruises and that nine stitches were required to close the wound.

The plaintiff was a passenger in an auto traveling east on E. Third St. while the defendant was driving south on Monroe St. The car in which the girl was riding, overturned. It was charged the defendant failed to yield the right-of-way at the intersection.

the Springfield and Xenia line had some trouble of the same nature.

Lowlands near Old Town and Alpha were inundated when the Little Miami River, Beaver Creek and other streams became flooded. The streams were almost at flood tide before the rains due to the thawing of snow and breaking up of the ice the previous day.

Summer cottages owned by Xenians north of Old Town along the Little Miami River, Massies creek and the mill race were surrounded by water and it was impossible to reach them Friday night.

Dr. F. M. Chambliss, Greene County coroner and Mrs. Chambliss, who have been living in their cottage at this point, were unable to reach their home. Dr. Chambliss had experienced considerable trouble Thursday afternoon and night due to the thaw and breaking up of the ice in the three streams near which his cottage is situated. Huge cakes of ice from five to eight inches thick swept down the streams breaking off fair sized trees in their path, several trees on the Chambliss property being ruined. A new barbecue which Dr. Chambliss recently completed, and had just wired for electricity, he believes suffered considerable damage from water. Other Xenians who own cottages in that vicinity are Clark Poland, Miss Lorena Mansfield and Clarence Fisher.

Lowlands near Alpha were flooded when Beaver Creek left its banks. Water also covered other fields in low sections over the county.

the students. The Rose girls' left hand was torn off by a flying timber.

Two women were reported injured at Texas City. Barnhart reported a second storm followed shortly after the first twister struck. Mrs. Amos Newman was killed in the second storm when her home was demolished.

The second storm isolated several other Illinois towns, Sterling, Dixon, Freeport, and its effect was felt as far north as the Wisconsin state line.

The storm struck Indiana near Fort Branch. Mrs. David Nolan, 65, was killed. Princeton, Madison and Evansville also felt the storm's force.

Crossing the Ohio river, the storm mounted in velocity and hit near Lexington. William Thrasher, 43, was blown from the Ohio river bridge near Louisville and drowned. Roy Litter, 21, and Clinton Mahoney, 24, both of Trimble County, were drowned when their skiff in which they were crossing the Ohio river from Madison, Ind., to Milton, Ky., was upset by the high wind.

William Thrasher, 27, Midway, Ind., was blown to death from a Big Four railroad bridge into the Ohio river at Louisville.

O. G. Cosse, 69, farmer, was killed when his barn was blown down, while he was inside watering his stock.

Matt Frelly, 35, was seriously injured on another farm when struck by flying timbers.

Georgetown, Ky., near where the one man was killed and the other injured, suffered considerable damage.

Five people were injured when a laundry at Elizabethtown, Ky., was demolished. The state loss is estimated at $400,000.

CHATTERJEE GIVES PICTURE OF INDIA

In spite of bad weather, a number of people, ventured out to hear Professor M. N. Chatterjee of Antioch College describe conditions in India to the Friends of Books Club at the library Friday.

Professor Chatterjee did not attempt to refute statements in Miss Mayo's book "Mother India". He admitted with a smile that he had not read the book, but endeavored instead to show conditions in India as early as 1630 and as late as today, for in his belief no tourist can picture life in the East as it really is and the only way to form just conclusions is to see the whole picture clearly. After speaking for an hour Professor Chatterjee offered to answer questions and the meeting was thrown open to all who cared to take part. A very interesting forty minutes of discussion followed.

The date of the next meeting will be announced later, but the program committee plans to obtain a speaker to discuss the new Lincoln material with special reference to the new life of Lincoln by Beveridge. The books suggested for preparatory reading are available at the library now.

If a police court or municipal court is established in Xenia, Kany said that no matter who is appointed mayor at this time, his tenure of office would only last for the remainder of the year.

Although it was considered the proper legal procedure to appoint a mayor and settle the question of his salary afterward, Commissioner Lighthizer took the view that the salary question should be thrashed out first.

He proposed that each commissioner who was a candidate for the post, submit to the commission what salary he would be willing to accept as mayor. It was his suggestion that the bids be opened and the low bidder be appointed mayor to serve until a police court or mayor's court is established.

Because of his opinions on the subject, Lighthizer refused to participate in the selection of a mayor.

City Solicitor J. A. Finney pointed out to the commission that it would be possible to obtain legislative action on a bill providing for a police court or municipal court for Xenia at the present session.

The judge of this court would be an elective office and Xenia voters would elect a judge for the court on a non-partisan ticket at the fall election. The commission, it is believed, would have the power to stipulate in the bill passed by the legislature the amount of salary the judge should receive in conformity with the responsibility involved.

To make the plan water-tight, the commission would probably pass an amendment to the city charter, repealing the section granting judicial powers to the mayor.

Solicitor Finney declared that if a municipal court is established, the presiding judge would have jurisdiction in civil as well as criminal cases and it would be a more complicated procedure to obtain enactment of such a bill.

On the other hand, commissioners feel that a police court in which the judge has only jurisdiction in criminal cases and the fee system is abolished, would better suit local needs.

The judge of a police court would receive a straight salary fixed by the commission, half of which would be paid by the county and half by the city. The county would bear half the expense since all fines imposed by the judge in state cases revert to the county and fines in city cases go to the city. Fines in state cases amount to nearly $1,500 each year here.

If a police court is established here it will be similar to the old municipal court declared unconstitutional by the Ohio Supreme Court and abolished in 1925. The only difference is that the judge of the court will be elected by the voters instead of being appointed by the commission.

CHILD IS AWARDED JUDGMENT FOR $150

For injuries received in an auto accident at Third and Monroe Sts. August 29, 1928, Betty Rose McKay daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. P. McKay, E. Second St., was awarded $150 damages, the full amount sought, against Brant U. Bell, Hill and Columbus Sts., in Common Pleas Court Friday.

The damage action was filed Friday and judgment was confessed the same day.

The suit was filed on behalf of Betty McKay by Daisy McKay, her mother.

The petition charged that the girl sustained an injury to her leg in addition to minor cuts and bruises and that ninety stitches were required to close the wound.

The plaintiff was a passenger in an auto traveling east on E. Third St., while the defendant was driving south on Monroe St. The car in which the girl was riding, over-turned. It was charged the defendant failed to yield the right-of-way at the intersection.

STORM CAUSES DAMAGE HERE; UTILITIES HIT

the Springfield and Xenia line had some trouble of the same nature.

Lowlands near Old Town and Alpha were inundated when the Little Miami River, Beaver Creek and other streams became flooded. The streams were almost at flood tide before the rains due to the thawing of snow and breaking up of the ice the previous day.

Summer cottages owned by Xenians north of Old Town along the Little Miami River, Massies creek and the mill race were surrounded by water and it was impossible to reach them Friday night.

Dr. F. M. Chambliss, Greene County coroner and Mrs. Chambliss, who have been living in their cottage at this point, were unable to reach their home. Dr. Chambliss had experienced considerable trouble Thursday afternoon and night due to the thaw and breaking up of the ice in the three streams, near which his cottage is situated. Huge cakes of ice from five to eight inches thick swept down the streams breaking off fair sized trees in their path, several trees on the Chambliss property being ruined. A new barbecue which Dr. Chambliss had just completed, had just wired for electricity, he believes suffered considerable damage from water. Other Xenians who own cottages in that vicinity are Clark Poland, Miss Lorena Mansfield and Clarence Fisher.

Lowlands near Alpha were flooded when Beaver Creek left its banks. Water also covered other fields in low sections over the county.

the students. The Rose girl's left hand was torn off by a flying timber.

Two women were reported injured at Xenia City. Farmers reported a second storm followed shortly after the first twister struck. Mrs. Amos Newman was killed in the second storm when her home was demolished.

The second storm isolated several other Illinois towns, Sterling, Dixon, Freeport, and its effect was felt as far north as the Wisconsin state line.

The storm struck Indiana near Fort Branch. Mrs. David Nolan, 65, was killed. Princeton, Madison and Evansville also felt the storm's force.

Crossing the Ohio river, the storm mounted in velocity and hit near Lexington. William Thrasher, 43, was blown from the Ohio river bridge near Louisville and drowned. Roy Litter, 21, and Clinton Mahoney, 24, of Milton, Ky., were drowned when the skiff in which they were rowing from Madison, Ind., to Milton, capsized. Their bodies were not recovered.

Several houses were reported demolished at Louisville and Lexington. Telegraph and telephone communication was inoperative along a large section of the river valley.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Jan. 19.—Winds of cyclonic like volume swept over Kentucky, yesterday, leaving in their wake, death and a mounting property loss.

Roy Litter, 21, and Clinton Mahoney, 24, both of Trimble County, were drowned when their skiff in which they were crossing the Ohio river from Madison, Ind., to Milton, Ky., was upset by the high wind.

William Thrasher, 27, Midway, Ind., was blown to death from a Big Four railroad bridge into the Ohio river at Louisville.

O. G. Coase, 40, farmer, was killed when his barn was blown down, while he was inside watering his stock.

Matt Frielly, 35, was seriously injured on another farm when struck by flying timbers.

Georgetown, Ky., near where the one man was killed and the other injured, suffered considerable damage.

Five people were injured when a laundry at Elizabethtown, Ky., was demolished. The state loss is estimate at $400,000.

The American Legion is non-partisan and non-political. It does not acknowledge rank nor make any distinction between overseas men and those who served in the United States or between the enlisted men and the officer.

A picture without words? Almost—for this is the universal experience of young girlhood, the time when she must place herself against the target of Love to await the dart that determines her destiny.

She can allow herself to be struck by the first of the arrows from Cupid's quiver, or she can delay the event, enjoying the pleasure of the occasion. And it is she, not Cupid, who chooses the arrow that wounds. By her woman's intelligence she directs his aim against her.

CHATTERJEE GIVES PICTURE OF INDIA

In spite of bad weather, a number of people, ventured out to hear Professor M. N. Chatterjee of Antioch College describe conditions in India to the Friends of Books Club at the library Friday.

Professor Chatterjee did not attempt to refute statements in Miss Mayo's book "Mother India". He admitted with a smile that he had not read the book, but endeavored instead to show conditions in India as early as 1630 and as late as today, for in his belief no tourist can picture life in the East as it really is and the only way to form just conclusions is to see the whole picture clearly. After speaking for an hour Professor Chatterjee offered to answer questions and the meeting was thrown open to all who cared to take part. A very interesting forty minutes of discussion followed.

The date of the next meeting will be announced later, but the program committee plans to obtain a speaker to discuss the new Lincoln material with special reference to the new life of Lincoln by Beveridge. The books suggested for preparatory reading are available at the library now.

Her proper attitude on this occasion is to face the marksman gallily and with full confidence of her own ability to make a choice. Somewhere in the quiver lies the arrow with her life lover's name engraved upon it. She must be clever enough to know when it is drawn and when the bow is snapped.

She makes herself even more attractive for the test. Her girlish figure and laughing eyes make her a tempting morsel as she stands against the target, the wind breaking fresh on her parted lips.

But she must not tarry there long, for others await their turn.

FISK SINGERS WILL SING OLD MELODIES AT ANTIOCH COLLEGE

Negro spirituals never before heard in this part of the country will be sung Wednesday, January 23, in Kelly Hall, Antioch College, Yellow Springs, by the Fisk Jubilee Singers.

The songs are old of course, but are a part of the rich store which have not found their way into printed form or reached the ears of professional singers, and which were dug up recently in various parts of the rural South by the Jubilee Singers and the department of music of Fisk University, Nashville, Tenn. Fisk has become the center of the collection and study of the melodies and words of Negro religious and plantation songs, and the multitude of them will make possible new programs for several years to come, even in the recent awakening of interest in this class of music.

The first company of Fisk Singers started out in 1871, six years after Fisk University was established. It had two objects, to create a better understanding of the talents and spirit of the Negroes and to bring badly needed financial aid to the University. In those days appeals for funds were made at the concerts, and collections taken. The singers were University students with little musical training to add to their native singing ability. That was three generations ago. The present quartet of singers is made up of alumni of the University, thoroughly trained in music and selected from the scores of splendid Negro singers being graduated from there yearly. Admission tickets will be sold at the door at 75c each or at Sayre's Drug Store, Xenia.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

COMING HOME — Return, ye back-sliding children, and I will heal your back-slidings. Behold, we come unto thee; for thou art the Lord our God.—Jeremiah 3:22.

BIG BUSINESS AND INDIVIDUAL AMBITIONS

Are the young America's opportunities to achieve success today as great as they were when Edison, Rockefeller, Mellon, Schwab and Ford were young?

Andrew W. Mellon, secretary of the treasury, answers this question in an article written for the February issue of Cosmopolitan.

"My own view is that opportunities are infinitely more varied," he says, "than was the case 50 years ago, the rewards are greater and the enjoyment is more immediate."

"If I were given the opportunity to change my own period of life during the last 50 years for any other time, I would choose, without hesitation, the next half-century and needless to say I would live it in America."

Secretary Mellon derides the frequent contentions that competition is too keen today for the average young man to have the chance he once had, that great corporations and highly organized industries make promotion a slow mechanical process, and that the opportunities to grow up with a young industry have vanished.

"Quite the contrary," he declares.

"It was easier perhaps 50 years ago for a man to become the proprietor of a small business, or to establish himself as a lawyer, a banker or a farmer. We had not yet come to the end of 'free land,' so that the restless man or misfit could always fall back upon this as an outlet.

"But in proportion to population and existing wealth, competition was just as keen then as now. And the opportunities for free education, especially technical and professional training, were not so great as now. Business openings were fewer because business itself had not developed in volume or variety as we know it today."

Secretary Mellon believes the average man has a better chance of rising to the top as a part of a great business machine than on his own initiative.

"It is true that instead of starting out in business for himself as formerly, he frequently goes today into a large established business. The criticism usually made is that in such a large concern he has less individual responsibility than in a small one-man business where his success depends entirely upon himself.

Secretary Mellon points out that as part of a large organization, adequately financed and directed by men in touch with market conditions throughout the world, the average man's chance of failure is far less than it would be outside.

POWER

P. W. Bridgman, Harvard professor of physics, has made a machine capable of producing a pressure of 600,000 pounds to the square inch. This is the greatest pressure ever attained by any man-made device. Do you wonder what can be done with such astounding power? Hot water subjected to this pressure becomes a block of ice. An egg in ice cold water, subjected to this power, is hard boiled.

One's imagination grows lame in an attempt to forecast a future wherein power is as only hinted at now becomes a workable reality.

When we hurry we all too frequently hurry into mistakes. And we lose all the time we gained in explaining our mistakes.

Your BROADWAY And Mine

By Walter Winchell

NEW YORK — Some of the Park Row gossips gathered to reminisce about Tex Rickard, and one of them contended that his real nickname was "Dink" until a kid in Alaska tagged him Tex.

They said of him, too, that he got more of a kick out of kidding a sports writer. His pet diversion was watching a newcomer ankle under the heavy carpet in his office. When the lad touched the doornob he got an electric shock.

His last conference with the sports chroniclers, to hear one tell it, was at the Garden. Suddenly he got up and left the group, but not before he remarked in his manner:

"Say! You fellows oughta come down to Miami with me. Gotta great story down there. Maybe it'll be front page stuff, too."

Why the Editor Left Town — The Americana bureau of the Mercury offers it on a Mississippi rag's Social Notes Department:

"Mrs. Sarah Allen is seriously sick at her home in Bayville Neck, and all persons are requested by her sons to stop coming to see the big hog until she improves."

The Real New Yorker — Elmer Rice, the author of "Street Scene," which the William Brady, Ltd., has provided at the Playhouse, appears to have solved that ageless query, "What's the matter with your second act?" The middle episode of the new and compelling drama is the most effective second act the New York stage has offered in years.

and it gripped, held and excited all of us until the fuzzi lifted on our arms. In sum, a hair-raising scene.

Mr. Rice has jotted down the loves, emotions, sounds, squeaks and sobbs of the New York tenement dwellers, and Mr. Brady assigned that adroit and artful scenic architect, Jo Meizner, to fashion the lone setting, which left you breathless with admiration the moment the asbestos lifted and revealed it. It is a classic, this artificial tenement building, and Mr. Meizner is to be cheered.

"Street Scene" revolves about the Margrants, an Irish family familiar to the sidewalks of New York. Mrs. Murrant, still young and easy to look upon, believes that life isn't worth letting slip by without living, so she accepts the attention of the milkman. The mother of a grown daughter and a small son, she is gossiped about by the local Winchells until her stage-hand husband discovers her infidelity. He returns unexpectedly and murders them. The murder episode is the most thrilling event of the soggy season, and is likely to send "Street Scene" into the clinic division.

The following act offers an almost equally startling scene when the killer is captured and permitted a few parting words with his daughter Rose. It is a most touching and heart-jerking moment, and opens the turgid ducts. The first act is a bit long and repetitious, and could stand the pruning blade. That would do much to make "Street Scene" a more graceful show.

The Way of the World

BY GROVE PATTERSON

WORTH IT

Experts from the department of commerce figure that folks in the United States spent five billion dollars on Christmas shopping. Perhaps it was a few million or two among friends? And we are all friendly at Christmas. The spending was a good thing. It put a lot of money in circulation, helped everybody, added to the general prosperity. As to the kindly Christmas spirit, how do you feel about that today? Does the glow last.

GOOD NEW ENGLAND NEWS

The rest of the country has been feeling sorry for New England. Much of the cotton mill business has moved south. North Carolina today becomes what Massachusetts used to be. Comes now good news that in various lines of manufacturing New England is booming. New activity is reported from Maine to Connecticut. Good news for New England and good news for all the rest of the country.

FAITH

Faith keeps you going even when the facts are against you. Posdick, one of the soundest and straightest thinkers of the day, says: "How to keep one's heart in the midst of life's stress and to maintain an undiscouraged front in the face of its difficulties is not an achievement which springs from anything that a laboratory can demonstrate or logic can affirm. It is an achievement of faith."

Faith does not call upon us to believe the incredible things, but faith gives us the courage and hope to believe that a proper and intelligent adjustment to the facts of life will bring a better day.

WEATHER INSIDE

You have the making of a strong personality if you can carry your own weather. Most of us are dependent on atmosphere. If it is a dark, dull, and dreary day we are dark and dreary, too. The biggest people carry their own scenery. Sing Edna St. Vincent Millay:

"The soul can split the skies in

And let the face of God shine through."

LOWER TARIFFS DECLARED INEVITABLE
By EDWARD S. FILENE
(Merchant and Business Economist)

(Edward A. Filene was born at Salem, Mass., and educated in the public schools of that city. All his life he has been active in the promotion of better organization of production and distribution in the United States and Europe and was a pioneer in applying scientific and efficient organization in retail distribution. He is now president and chairman of the board of William Filene's Sons company. He is a member of a score of organizations and has written several books on subjects in his field.)

Big business — which always does in the end what is to its own interest — must inevitably adopt a policy in favor of lower tariffs.

Big business will reverse itself on other problems, including shorter working days, higher wages, smaller profits and lower selling prices. In each of these instances present policy is the direct opposite of what it was 20 years ago. And so it will be with the tariff.

Behind the trend toward lower tariffs is the rapid growth of mass methods of production and distribution which not only need no tariff protection but thrive best under low tariffs or free trade. Mass raises anew the question of world trade because the vastly increased volume of goods produced, which cannot be marketed except in foreign lands. The surplus — that is any general surplus — is relatively new to American industry. It is destined to change our views about tariffs. In the long run we will change, through force or economic circumstances, from a nation of protectionists to a nation of low tariff advocates, or free traders.

I say this not as an advocate of free trade myself. I am not now and never have been a free trader, but always have been an opportunist on tariff matters.

I believe that conditions and theories must determine tariff policies, and as mass production methods spread business men will find it to their profit to work for low tariffs.

The United States has a greater domestic market than any other nation — a population of 120,000,000 consumers who are more prosperous than any people have been in the history of the world.

The joint salvation of the nations of the world lies in the exchange of their surplus goods. Here the problem of tariffs becomes vital because tariffs restrict trade. Business men recognize now that it is important to the United States for Europe to remove or lower its high tariffs against our goods. They will come to see that it is important for Europe — and the United States — that we lower our tariffs.

THE GIRL WE THOUGHT WE LEFT BEHIND US

Behind the Scenes in Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON — Senators William E. Borah of Idaho, and George H. Moses of New Hampshire, look like making Herbert Hoover more trouble than all his money in the next four years. Borah's term expires in less than that, but he'll be re-elected or prophesied is a lost art.

Moses has until 1933 to serve. Both Borah and Moses are mentioned among possibilities for the state portfolio, but it's mere talk.

Borah doubtless could have the job by demanding it as his due, but it is quite unlikely he will demand it. He can have more fun where he is. Mr. Hoover is equally unlikely to draft him. He's too headstrong.

Moses probably would accept, but is not apt to be invited. He's too sassy.

Borah unquestionably thinks he was the "whole thing" in the last campaign.

Moses thinks he was. Dr. Hubert Work, as chairman of the G. O. P. national committee, perhaps thinks he was, too. Dr. Work is of the meek and humble order of creation, and can be knocked over the nose. Senators Borah and Moses are not a bit like that.

William S. Vale may think he had a heap to do with Mr. Hoover's nomination at least, but Senator-elect Vale is too sick to count. Borah and Moses are as healthy as bears.

And, of course, there are many others who think "some pinkies" of themselves, but might few to compare with Senators Borah and Moses.

Senator Borah indisputably fought for Mr. Hoover to good effect, at Kansas City, and during the succeeding months, on the stump, until election eve itself. Senator Moses claimed the task of bossing the G. O. P. candidate's eastern seaboard campaign. The "organization" was far from anxious to put him in charge, for Moses is a wisecracker whose smart sayings frequently react dangerously. He shoots hard and straight, but is tricky to handle because of his awful recoil.

Doc Work would gladly have declined his services had he been given the option, but the New Hampshire senator gave him no choice. He simply grabbed the Hoover eastern management and hung onto it, because it could not be taken away from him without a blackjack, which it was not deemed diplomatic to swing on him at that particular time.

It is good guessing that Mr. Hoover considers himself more deeply indebted to Senator Borah than to Senator Moses — though papers not as much so as Senators Borah believes he ought to feel.

Senator Moses, however, claims credit for the Hoover victory in the supposedly critical east — notably New York — forgetting Massachusetts and Rhode Island that the coming administration — and is not disposed to admit can possibly owe quite as much to anybody else as it owes to him.

Senator Borah has a reputation for doing yeoman work toward creating presidents and then driving them gray-haired by insisting on dictating their policies to them.

Senator Moses is the most persistently and venomously sarcastic public man on Capitol Hill unless he has absolutely his own way.

Mr. Hoover can hardly help disagreeing with Borah. He can hardly help miffing Moses. Each is equally independent in his own peculiar fashion. They are a mean pair for any president to have, inside his own party, continually hushwhacking him.

How to Achieve Beauty

BY MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

From inertia we passed to wriggling and from wriggling to squatting. Now we're beginning to get somewhere in this long drawn out process of evolution. Truly, it seems to me that the most doubtful point I can think up against the entire theory of evolution is the utter lack of conception of such patience as both the master mind and the structure it works upon would have to possess. How can life or nature or God have waited endless centuries to perfect a serpent so that it could eventually develop from like tendencies?

So, to go back to the exercises with which I am infinitely more familiar, and let me explain largely that the group I have classified under the mammal variety are the "all-four" exercises. Man is now beginning to rise from the ground, and find new use for legs and arms — not only as propellers, but in hanging and grasping. Naturally, as they attained this new growth, more strength developed. Nature has a way of fitting her results to our needs. So we begin to discover a certain balance between arms and legs, a gradual strengthening of the spinal column, the abdominal wall growing stronger and firmer so that the delicate inner organism is protected even in a suspended position.

All your exercises now must work toward the accomplishment of this end. Try to perfect a half dozen or more variations of the "all-four" exercises. Many modern physicians claim that if man were to spend even a little time daily on "all-fours," the results would be very beneficial.

Chicken and Rice — One-half medium sized hen, one and three-fourths quarts of water, one tablespoon salt, one and three-fourths cups cooked rice. Cut up chicken, wash and add giblets. Put all together in large stew kettle, cover with water and stew until nearly tender, bring to a brisk boil, add rice. Cook until rice has absorbed the broth. The rice absorbing the broth becomes rich, filled with pieces of chicken and is of the same consistency of mashed potatoes serves six.

You need not always cook a whole chicken at one time, and may like this way of cooking and serving a part of it.

Fig Meringue Pie — One-half pound of figs, one cup boiling water, grated rind of lemon, grated rind of one orange, juice of one-half orange, three tablespoons sugar, two egg whites, one baked pastry shell. Wash figs and cook them in the boiling water until they are tender. Chop fine and cook with orange and lemon rind, stirring constantly. Beat in the orange juice and one tablespoon of the sugar. Turn into a previously baked shell and cover with a meringue made by beating the whites of the eggs with the remaining sugar, until stiff. Place in oven and brown. Chill before serving.

Diet and Health

BY LULU HUNT PETERS, M.D., AUTHOR OF "DIET AND HEALTH" AND "DIET FOR CHILDREN"

When Winter Comes

When winter comes, colds are not far behind. Perhaps one reason that makes colds more prevalent after winter sets in, is the over-heating of the homes, the dryness of the air due to the methods of heating, the lack of proper ventilation. Another is produced chilling when not clothed warmly enough, during a sudden change, and still another is that the diet is apt to be more unbalanced than in the summer months on this later). These conditions undermine the resistance of the mucous membranes and the germs that are always present have favorable conditions for multiplying.

The technical name for a cold is acute coryza, and more people suffer from it than from any other ailment, and more suffer from the complications of colds than from any other disease.

It is not known if there is a definite germ that is responsible for colds (there probably isn't for all colds), but there is an acute type which apparently is infectious. We have all had the experience of catching this bird ourselves, after coming in contact with a person acting as a nest for one. For this reason, a person with an acute cold should cage himself at home and go to bed. ("S' awful.")

Neglected colds not infrequently result in the extension of the infection into the bronchial tubes, and then perhaps to the lung tissue itself, with pneumonia resulting.

One who has frequent colds certainly must realize that there is something wrong with his hygienic program, somewhere. A deficient diet, especially one deficient in the vitamin A, which is found in cream, milk, butter, fresh green vegetables, is a known cause of the lowered resistance of the mucous membranes. Vitamin A is now being called the anti-infection vitamin, it seems to have so much to do with keeping up resistance to infections. Another thing that lowers the resistance to colds and other things is a diet too high in acid forming foods so that the blood alkalinity is slightly lowered.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

COMING HOME — Return, ye back-sliding children, and I will heal your back-slidings. Behold, we come unto thee; for thou art the Lord our God.—Jeremiah 3:22.

BIG BUSINESS AND INDIVIDUAL AMBITIONS

Are the young America's opportunities to achieve success today as great as they were when Edison, Rockefeller, Mellon, Schwab and Ford were young?

Andrew W. Mellon, secretary of the treasury, answers this question in an article written for the February issue of Cosmopolitan.

"My own view is that opportunities are infinitely more varied," he says, "than was the case 50 years ago, the rewards are greater and the enjoyment is more immediate."

"If I were given the opportunity to change my own period of life during the last 50 years for any other time, I would choose, without hesitation, the next half-century and need not say I would live it in America."

Secretary Mellon derides the frequent contentions that competition is too keen today for the average young man to have the chance he once had, that great corporations and highly organized industries make promotion a slow mechanical process, and that the opportunities to grow up with a young industry have vanished.

"Quite the contrary," he declares.

"It was easier perhaps 50 years ago for a man to become the proprietor of a small business, or to establish himself as a lawyer, a banker or a farmer. We had not yet come to the end of 'free land,' so that the restless man or misfit could always fall back upon this as an outlet."

"But in proportion to population and existing wealth, competition was just as keen then as now. And the opportunities for free education, especially technical and professional training, were not so great as now. Business openings were fewer because business itself had not developed in volume or variety as we know it today."

Secretary Mellon believes the average man has a better chance of rising to the top as part of a great business machine than on his own initiative.

"It is true that instead of starting out in business for himself as formerly, he frequently goes today into a large established business. The criticism usually made is that in such a large concern he has less individual responsibility than in a small one-man business where his success depends entirely upon himself."

Secretary Mellon points out that as part of a large organization, adequately financed and directed by men in touch with market conditions throughout the world, the average man's chance of failure is far less than it would be outside.

POWER

P. W. Bridgman, Harvard professor of physics, has made a machine capable of producing a pressure of 600,000 pounds to the square inch. This is the greatest pressure ever attained by any man-made device. Do you wonder what can be done with such astounding power? Hot water subjected to this pressure becomes a block of ice. An egg in ice cold water, subjected to this power, is hard boiled.

One's imagination grows lame in an attempt to forecast a future wherein power as is only hinted at now becomes a workable reality.

When we hurry we all too frequently hurry into mistakes. And we lose all the time we gained in explaining our mistakes.

Your BROADWAY
By Walter Winchell And Mine

NEW YORK — Some of the Park Rowers gathered to reminisce about Tex Rickard, and one of them contended that his real nickname was Dink until a kid in Alaska tagged him Tex. They said of him, too, that he got more of a kick out of kidding a sports writer. His pet diversion was watching a new-comer ankle across the heavy carpet in his office. When he had touched the doornob he got an electric shock.

His last conference with the sports chroniclers, to hear one tell it, was at the Garden. Suddenly he got up and left the group, but not before he remarked in his manner:

"Say! You fellows oughta come down to Miami with me. Gotta great story down there. Mebbe it'll be front page stuff, too."

The American bureau of the Mercury offers it from a Mississippi rag's Social Notes Department:

"Mrs. Sarah Allen is seriously sick at her home in Bayly's Neck, and all persons are requested by her sons to stop coming to see the big hog until she improves."

The Real New Yorker

Elmer Rice, the author of "Street Scene," which the William Bradly, Ltd., has provided at the Playhouse, appears to have solved that ageless query, "What's the matter with your second act?" The middle episode of the new and compelling drama is the most effective second act the New York stage has offered in years, and it gripped, held and excited all of us until the fuzzi lifted on our arms. In sum, a hair-raising scene.

Mr. Rice has jotted down the loves, emotions, sounds, squeals and sobs of the New York tenement dwellers, and Mr. Brady assigned that adroit and artistic scenic architect, Joe Meizner, to fashion the lone setting, which left you breathless with admiration the moment the asbestos lifted and revealed it. It is a classic, this artificial tenement building, and Mr. Meizner is to be cheered.

"Street Scene" revolves about the Maureans, an Irish family familiar to the sidewalks of New York. Mrs. Murrant, still young and easy to look upon, believes that life isn't worth letting slip by without living, so she accepts the attention of the milkman. The mother of a grown daughter and a small son, she is gossiped about by the local Winchells until her stage-hand husband discovers her infidelity. He returns unexpectedly and murders them. The murder episode is the most thrilling event of the soggy season, and is likely to send "Street Scene" into the clinic division.

The following act offers an almost equally startling scene when the killer is captured and permitted a few parting words with his daughter Rose. It is a most touching and heard-judging moment, and opens the tear ducts. The first act is a bit long and repetitious, and could stand the pruning blade. That would do much to make "Street Scene" a more graceful show.

The Way
of the World

BY GROVE PATTERSON

WORTH IT

Experts from the department of commerce figure that folks in the United States spent five billion dollars on Christmas shopping. Perhaps it was a few million or two among friends? And we are all friendly at Christmas time. The spending was a good thing. It put a lot of money in circulation, helped everybody, added to the general prosperity. As to the kindly Christmas spirit, how do you feel about that today? Does the glow last.

GOOD NEW ENGLAND NEWS

The rest of the country has been feeling sorry for New England. Much of the cotton mill business has moved south. North Carolina today becomes what Massachusetts used to be. Comes now good news that in various lines of manufacturing New England is booming. New activity is reported from Maine to Connecticut. Good news for New England and good news for all the rest of the country.

Faith keeps you going even when the facts are against you. Presumably, one of the soundest and straightest thinkers of the day, says: "How to keep one's heart in the midst of life's stress and to maintain an undiscourageable front in the face of its difficulties is not an achievement which springs from anything that a laboratory can demonstrate or logic can affirm. It is an achievement of faith."

Faith does not call upon you to believe incredible things, but faith gives us the courage and hope to believe that a proper and intelligent adjustment to the facts of life will bring a better day.

WEATHER INSIDE

You have the making of a strong personality if you can carry your own weather. Most of us are dependent on atmosphere. If it is a dark, dull, and dreary day we are dark and dreary, too. The biggest people carry their own scenery. Sings Edna St. Vincent Millay:

"The soul can split the skies in two
And let the face of God shine through."

Who's Who
and
Timely ViewsLOWER TARIFFS DECLARED INEVITABLE

By EDWARD A. FLENE
(Merchant and Business Economist)

(Edward A. Flene was born at Salem, Mass., and educated in the public schools of that city. All his life he has been active in the promotion of better organization of production and distribution in the United States and Europe and was a pioneer in applying scientific and efficient organization in retail distribution. He is now president and chairman of the board of William Flene's Sons company. He is a member of a score of organizations and has written several books on subjects in his field.)

Big business — which always does in the end what is to its own interest — must inevitably adopt a policy in favor of lower tariffs.

Big business will reverse itself on the tariff as it has on other problems, including shorter working days, higher wages, smaller profits and lower selling prices. In each of these instances present policy is the direct opposite of what it was 20 years ago. And so it will be with the tariff.

Behind the trend toward lower tariffs is the rapid growth of mass methods of production and distribution which not only need no tariff protection but thrive best under low tariffs or free trade. Mass raises anew the question of world trade because the vastly increased volume of goods produced surpluses which cannot be marketed except in foreign lands. The surplus—that is any general surplus—is relatively new to American industry. It is destined to change our views about tariffs. In the long run we will change, through force or economic circumstances, from a nation of protectionists to a nation of low tariff advocates, or free traders.

I say this not as an advocate of free trade myself. I am not now and never have been a free trader, but always have been an opportunist on tariff matters. I believe that conditions and not theories must determine tariff policies, and as mass production methods spread business men will find it to their profit to work for low tariffs.

The United States has a greater domestic market than any other nation—a population of 120,000,000 consumers who are more prosperous than any people have been in the history of the world.

The joint salvation of the nations of the world lies in the change of their surplus goods. Here the problem of tariffs becomes vital because tariffs restrict trade. Business men recognize now that it is important to the United States for Europe to remove or lower its high tariffs against our goods. They will come to see that it is important for Europe — and the United States — that we lower our tariffs.

THE GIRL WE THOUGHT WE LEFT BEHIND US

Behind the Scenes in Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON — Senators William E. Borah of Idaho, and George H. Moses of New Hampshire, look like making Herbert Hoover more trouble than all his money in the next four years.

Borah's term expires in less than that, but he'll be re-elected or re-nominated. He is not a senator-elect. He is too sick to serve. Both Borah and Moses are mentioned among possibilities for the state portfolio, but it's mere talk.

Borah doubtless could have the job by demanding it as his due, but it is quite unlikely he will demand it. He can have more fun where he is. Mr. Hoover is equally unlikely to draft him. He's too headstrong.

Moses probably would accept, but is not apt to be invited. He's too sassy.

Borah unquestionably thinks he was the "whole thing" in the last campaign. Senator Moses, however, claims credit for the Hoover victory in the supposedly critical east — notably New York — for forgetting Massachusetts and Rhode Island that the coming administration — and is not disposed to admit to anybody else as it owes to him.

Senator Borah has a reputation for doing yeoman work toward creating presidents and then driving them gray-haired by insisting on dictating their policies to them.

Senator Moses is the most persistently and venomously sarcastic public man on Capitol Hill unless he has absolutely his own way.

Mr. Hoover can hardly help disagreeing with Borah. He can hardly help nipping Moses. Each is equally independent in his own peculiar fashion. They are a mean pair for any president to have, inside his own party, continually bushwhacking him.

Do Work would gladly have declined his services had he been given the option, but the New Hampshire senator gave him none. He simply grabbed the Hoover eastern management and hung onto it, because it could not be taken away from him without creating a blackjack, which was not deemed diplomatic to swing on him at that particular time.

It is good guessing that Mr. Hoover considers himself more deeply indebted to Senator Borah than to Senator Moses — though perhaps not as much so as Senator Borah believes he ought to feel.

Truly, it seems to me that the most doubtful point I can think up against the entire theory of evolution is the utter lack of conception of such patience as both the master mind and the structure it works upon would have to possess. How can life or nature or God have waited endless centuries to perfect a serpent so that it might eventually develop frog-like tendencies?

So, to go back to the exercises with which I am infinitely more familiar, and let me explain largely to the group I have classified under the mammal variety are the "all-four" exercises. Man is now beginning to rise from the ground, and find new use for legs and arms—not only as propellers, but in hanging and grasping. Naturally, as they attained this new growth, more strongly developed Nature has a way of fitting her results to our needs. So we begin to discover a certain balance between arms and legs, a gradual strengthening of the spinal column, the abdominal wall growing stronger and firmer so that the delicate inner organism is protected even in a suspended position.

Diet and Health

BY LULU HUNT PETERS, M.D., AUTHOR OF "DIET AND HEALTH" AND "DIET FOR CHILDREN"

When Winter Comes

When winter comes, colds are not far behind.

Why is this? Perhaps one reason that makes colds more prevalent after winter sets in, is the over-heating of the homes, the dryness of the air due to the methods of heating, the lack of proper ventilation. Another is prolonged chilling when not clothed warmly enough during a sudden change, and still another is that the diet is apt to be more unbalanced than in the summer months on this latter point.

These conditions undermine the resistance of the mucous membranes and the germs that are always present have favorable conditions for multiplying.

The technical name for a cold is acute coryza, and more people suffer from it than from any other ailment, and more suffer from the complications of colds than from any other disease.

It is not known if there is a definite germ that is responsible for colds (there probably isn't for all colds), but there is an acute type which apparently is infectious. We have all had the experience of catching this cold ourselves, after coming in contact with a person acting as a nest for one. For this reason, a person with an acute cold should cage himself at home and go to bed. ('S awful!')

Neglected colds not infrequently result in the extension of the infection into the bronchial tubes, and then perhaps to the lung tissue itself, with pneumonia resulting.

One who has frequent colds certainly must realize that there is something wrong with his hygienic program, somewhere. A deficient diet, especially one deficient in the vitamin A, which is found in cream, milk, butter, fresh green vegetables, is a known cause of the lowered resistance of the mucous membranes. Vitamin A is now being called the anti-infection vitamin, it seems to have so much to do with keeping up resistance to infections. Another thing that lowers the resistance to colds and other things is a diet too high in acid forming foods so that the blood alkalinity is slightly lowered.

One of the modern treatments for colds is the alkalizing treatment. The patient is put on a diet mostly of fruits and vegetables and milk and nuts (because they leave an alkaline ash after digestion), and besides this, is given small doses of bicarbonate of soda frequently. This overcomes any acidosis. Liberal amounts of water should be taken at the same time.

A cold water bath and steam baths, the right diet and vigorous exercise every day, with at least an hour out of doors, can "harden" the system so that colds are less easily contracted. Those who cannot take cold baths can dash cold water on the chest and arms.

When the cold comes on, continue to keep your windows open—they needn't be open so wide as in summer—for you must have a liberal supply of fresh air. Keep warm with extra bed clothing and don't hesitate to take a hot water bag or electric pad to bed with you. The electric pads you must watch for some of them heat unevenly and in some spots may burn.

Local applications of mild antiseptic oil solutions to the nose and throat, especially when they first seem dry, may be helpful. Gargle and spray the throat often with hot water (and add a liberal amount, too). A teaspoonful of baking soda and a teaspoonful of salt to the pint of water will make the gargle more effective. Follow this with the oil or glycerine.

Massage around the outside of the nose, under the ears and jaws, with the fingers or an electric vibrator. This brings the blood to the parts and is helpful. Bending exercises are also good. Sometimes a hot sweating bath (if you go to bed immediately after and do not get chilled) may be helpful in the beginning. If the cold is bad, better go to bed for a few days. Have a paper bag pinned near and use tissue paper handkerchiefs and have them burned. If you cannot do this, be sure the handkerchiefs are boiled before they are handled again.

Living and Loving

BY MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

How can a girl get rid of a persistent suitor whom she doesn't like, and who makes her boy friend jealous. Usually quite easily. Few people go where they know they are not wanted, and if any one persists in going to see another, they generally have some encouragement. It may not be the conscious encouragement, but it is there. A girl writes:

"Dear Mrs. Lee: I am a girl of 19 and am engaged to a fellow who is 24. I am staying with an old lady who is almost helpless. Her grandson, who is 18, keeps coming down to see me, as he says he loves me, and I do not care to be around him. I have told him not to come, but he keeps coming, and I think too much of the old lady to leave her. Please tell me how to keep this boy from coming to see me, as it makes my fiancé very jealous."

Just refuse to see him when he comes. Go out of the room when he comes in, and you will soon discourage him.

"Dear Mrs. Lee: I am a girl of 18 and very much in love with a fellow who is four years my senior. He is always talking about a girl whom he used to go with. He seems to be very much in love with her, but has told me he cares a lot for me. Do you think he does? Do you think we will ever be any more than friends? Whenever we have a quarrel it is always up to me to make it up. He doesn't seem to care whether we make up or not. How can I show him that I really love him?"

"Judge not that ye be not judged," is a good motto for us all. We are all formed differently. Our environments are different, all sorts of elements go to make up our lives and our habits. In all circumstances, we may feel ourselves equal to any happenings, and then have our smug self satisfaction torn from us and find our lives in chaos. Wait until you are a grandmother, my dear, before you judge your sisters quite so judged."

"The shock has upset my nerves dreadfully. I need a good sleep. Surely the night—or what there is left of it—ought to be peaceful enough here. We are nearing the woods. How quiet and cool it is. Notho can harm us in the dark underbrush! I shall take good care to pick out a branch—if I can find one—that is far from the top. I don't want to risk another visit from Horned Owl tonight."

But alas and alack for Gobbler's best laid plans. They went astray. Not yet were the poor Turkeys to have any peace. Just as Gobbler was about to enter the underwood a huge shape suddenly bounded into the air and with a wild shriek knocked the Wild Turkey right in front of Gobbler to the ground. The blow had come so quickly that the poor victim probably did not know what had hit him.

But that was the other Turkeys did. That was plain to Peter from the cries of fear and rage the Turkeys uttered, and the terrified efforts made to get out of the attacker's reach.

LOVESICK EVE

"Dear Mrs. Lee: I have been reading your column and would like very much to have a word. I am heartily sorry for those women who, before God and man, promised to love and honor one man and now, for some petty reason, find it impossible to do either. I wish they might be made to realize that that promise, so solemnly made, does not terminate in the divorce court. As to the one who declares her husband loveless, I can find no pity for her. If he did not love her before marriage she should not have married him. If he did love her then she has helped kill his love and, in the end, it is largely her fault. I do not have the best husband in the world nor is he demonstrative, but I love him dearly. I am so full of fault I can overlook his, and besides, I know he had them before I married him. I am not a bride nor a grandmother, but only a happy young woman of the present day."

"Judge not that ye be not judged," is a good motto for us all. We are all formed differently. Our environments are different, all sorts of elements go to make up our lives and our habits. In all circumstances, we may feel ourselves equal to any happenings, and then have our smug self satisfaction torn from us and find our lives in chaos. Wait until you are a grandmother, my dear, before you judge your sisters quite so judged."

Buccaneers Bump Troy In Second League Victory

OVERWHELM TROJANS 32 TO 9 IN FIRST GAME ON FOREIGN COURT

Birch Bell Scintillates Brilliantly In Fifth Straight Win; Bandbox Floor No Handicap To Wilson's Proteges

By PHIL FRAME

WORKING a short passing game with a slow-breaking offense, Xenia Central High "Buccaneers" won their fifth straight game and kept their Miami Valley League slate clean by wrestling a surprisingly easy 32 to 9 victory from Troy High School on the Trojan court Friday night.

From the very start a Xenia victory appeared to be a foregone conclusion. Troy trailed throughout the game, was never on fairly even terms and it was only a question of the decisiveness of the margin.

Led by Birch Bell, sophomore forward, who finally hit his stride and began parting the strings with shots from all sectors of the court, the Bucs won their second consecutive league game. It was Troy's second straight league setback.

Xenia, playing its first game of the season on a strange floor, actually exhibited its best form of the season, both from an offensive and defensive standpoint.

The Blue and White defense was so tight that the Trojan outfit was held to a single field goal in the first half and a total of three baskets, all made from long range, during the entire game.

Although the contest was played on a narrow, band-box court which would ordinarily increase the effectiveness of a zone defense, the Bucs displayed exceptional versatility in piercing the Troy "inner guard" time and again for short shots.

Xenia led Troy 7 to 3 at the end of the first quarter and increased this margin to 13 to 3 at the half.

Cress made Troy's lone basket in the opening half. In the third period the Xenia offense began functioning to even better advantage and the score mounted to 25 to 6 at the end of the quarter.

Both teams made frequent substitutions in the final quarter but the Xenia subs came through fine.

CEDARVILLE BEATS YELLOW SPRINGS HI

Boys' and girls' basketball teams representing Cedarville High School won a double-header from Yellow Springs High School on the latter's floor Friday night.

Cedarville girls' won an easy victory by a margin of 30 to 15 in the preliminary after which the boys finished the job by polishing off the Yellow Springs quintet 31 to 21 in a rather better game.

BADE RUTH "BUSHER" IN REAL LOVE LEAGUE

Man Who Attained Both Fame And Fortune In Baseball Made Failure Of Married Life.

By ALEXANDER C. HERMAN
Staff Correspondent for Central Press and The Gazette

NEW YORK, Jan. 19. — In the realm of outdoor sports, where a pace gets but a dusting, Babe Ruth still is the home-run king. But in the great world of indoor sports, where plates have to be washed and dried, the Babe is only a buster.

It took the tragic death of his wife to make him realize the grim irony of his paradox. And it may take some time for him to recover from the swift strike-out, served him by a cruel fate, which yanked his name off the sports pages to be a headline in a front-page story.

When the sensationalism blows over, the lumbering Babe—terribly hard hit by it all—may take his turn at bat again. For the ball mightily (if the tears lift from his eyes) and come home a hero again.

But in the other home, removed from the ball-park, he'll never get, that he has been just a flop. The orphan boy from Baltimore who never had a "home," today is still without one.

Once the Swatter thought that he had the key to the rare combination of all three essentials which make for happiness:

1. Fame—the recognition of achievement.
2. Wealth—wisely augmented and safely accumulating.
3. Love—expressed in family ties and warmth.

Of the first, the Babe certainly has his fill—ranking second only to Lindbergh as an international celebrity. His record smashing smacks have made his name a step ahead of his opponents at all times.

Xenia will meet Miamisburg in its third straight league encounter at the local gym Friday night, January 25.

Despite the adverse weather, a large number of Xenia rooters made the trip to Troy. Practically all of the Xenia fans, however, arrived too late to see more than the last half of the contest inasmuch as the game started at 7:30 o'clock, half an hour earlier than the regular starting time for all league contests. UPSET MARKS FIFTH ROUND SATURDAY IN GRADE SCHOOL LOOP

One upset marked the fifth round of play in the Intra-City Grade School Basketball League, Saturday morning at Central High School gymnasium.

Spring Hill fifth graders, heretofore unbeaten by McKinley 5B by a score of 10 to 6. Spring Hill, however, still retained first place in its class by a margin of half a game. Hildebrandt was high-point man for the winners, scoring eight of his team's points. Spencer played a fine floor game and on the whole the winners gave a far superior exhibition. Muterspaw played well for the losers.

McKinley 6B remained undefeated by trimming Spring Hill sixth grade 16 to 6 for its third straight victory. Spring Hill sixth graders won the league title last season but are now virtually out of the running. Flory and McDufford shared scoring honors for the winners, each making seven points.

Yeakley held Batson, star Spring Hill forward, scoreless, while Dudley also held Weinert, Batson's running mate, without a point.

Spring Hill salvaged something from the wreckage when its undefeated fourth grade quintet won its fourth straight game, defeating McKinley 4B by a score of 5 to 1. Harvey shot a foul for the losers. Leach and Powell shot baskets for the winners.

McKinley 4A, 5A and 6A teams were idle this round.

CEDARVILLE FACES STIFF ASSIGNMENT

Playing three basketball games in four days is the task faced by Cedarville College's basketball team.

The "Yellow-Jackets" had a game with Hanover College at Hanover, Ind., Friday night, but no report of the game was received at Cedarville and the result of the contest was unknown Saturday.

The Cedarville squad was scheduled to return home Friday night but failed to arrive and nothing had been heard from the team by Saturday noon, although a game is scheduled to be played with Bliss Business College of Columbus at Cedarville Saturday night. Girls' teams of the two colleges will meet in a preliminary.

Not content with playing two games in as many days, Coach Boist's quintet will rest up Sunday and then meet St. Xavier College at Cincinnati Monday night in a game which was originally scheduled to be played early in the season.

THE LIFE OF TEX RICKARD

Being A Colorful Account Of One Of America's Most Colorful Characters

CHAPTER VIII
By GEORGE KIRKSEY

United Press Staff Correspondent
Copyright, 1929, by United Press

The first "Battle of the Century" was staged at Boyle's Thirty Acres, Jersey City, on July 2, 1921, between Jack Dempsey and Georges Carpentier.

Success and the first boxing contest that ever drew over a million dollars. The bout attracted a crowd of 90,000 and a gate of $1,628,238. Rickard paid Dempsey $500,000 and Carpentier $200,000.

This bout marked the advent of the first real ballyhoo. It was Jack Kearns who first started talking millions to Rickard, but it was Rickard who carried through Kearns' idea.

When Kearns asked $300,000 for Dempsey's share of the gate during the early stages of negotiations for the bout, Rickard said: "You're crazy."

Kearns finally convinced Rickard that the match, properly steamed up, would draw more than a million. Then when Rickard made the match the public thought the promoter was "crazy" and riding to a financial crash.

Rickard began building up the bout by bringing Carpentier, who then held the light-heavyweight champion of Europe to this country, to meet Battling Levinsky, recognized on this side as the world's light-heavyweight champion. Carpentier won by a technical knock-out over the battered veteran and acquired the world's light-heavyweight title.

The "Orchid Man" As part of the ballyhoo Carpentier returned to France before he came back to this country to start training at Marnes-la-Matifeux. His training camp was located on a farm amidst the estates of rich New Yorkers.

Louis Sherry, the millionaire candy man, lived across the road from Carpentier's camp. Carpentier did his road work through the picturesque parks of these wealthy aristocrats, rode in their yachts and lived up to his reputation as "The Orchid Man of France."

The public was admitted to his workout only two afternoons a week. The reason the public was barred was to prevent it from finding out that Carpentier was no match for the terrors of the Frenchman. If they had seen the Frenchman, they would have been no fight.

While Carpentier was supposed to have been perfecting secret punches behind closed gates, he was loitering around in a silk dressing gown practicing dance steps.

It was reported that Rickard went to Dempsey before the fight and asked him to "carry Carpentier along for a few rounds," but it was never admitted by either the promoter or the champion. The knowledge of Rickard's character goes to show that once the money is in the box office, he doesn't care what happens in the ring and it is doubtful if he actually requested Dempsey to allow the Frenchman to make a good showing.

There was considerable ill feeling against Dempsey at that time because of his war record and the champion was worked up to the point where he wanted to annihilate Carpentier.

Boyle's Thirty Acres Rickard built an immense wooden bowl on a barren tract of land on the outskirts of New Jersey for the bout. It later became known as Boyle's Acres because of the ground on which it was built.

When construction was started on the arena, it was predicted that the structure would never be filled. Rickard worked day and night supervising the work and when completed it was his pride and joy.

But Rickard's power of showmanship prevailed and the largest crowd in the history up to that time packed every available inch of the arena to see the crude, unshaven, hated Dempsey, battered down "The Orchid Man of France" in four rounds.

The Dempsey-Carpentier bout ushered in the golden era of boxing and was the forerunner to Rickard's subsequent $2,000,000 gate. Dempsey was guaranteed $300,000 for the Carpentier bout, but actually received half a million, his percentage swelling the figure. Carpentier's sum of $200,000 as the loser was the larger than any other single purse received by a boxer up to that time.

Besides the financial angle, the Dempsey-Carpentier bout was notable for the fact that it attracted the socially prominent to a prize fight in large numbers for the first time. It was the first large cosmopolitan fight crowd, in which millionaires rubbed elbows with the rank and file of boxing followers.

Shortly after the Dempsey-Carpentier bout Rickard got into trouble with the government over the transportation of the moving picture of the fight from New Jersey to New York. Despite a warning from the government, the films were shown in Broadway movie houses. The case dragged through the courts, but Rickard was finally convicted and fined $7,000.

On August 1920, the New York State legislature passed the Walker boxing bill, allowing decisions and fifteen round bouts in New York State. Rickard's influence was instrumental in the passage of the bill legalizing boxing in New York State.

Rickard took hold of the old Madison Square Garden July 13, 1920, and on August 4 organized the Madison Square Garden Sporting club. Thirteen days later the first decision contest was held in New York State after an eclipse of almost twenty years. He did not attempt to promote any big bouts in the old Garden, but he succeeded in placing the business on a paying basis for the first time in years.

After the Dempsey-Carpentier bout Rickard saw that there was no one for Dempsey to fight and he began looking around for another opponent to pit against the champion in the "Second Battle of the Century."

About this time he saw the crude South American Luis Firpo in action and he immediately began laying his plans to smoke up Firpo for a bout with Dempsey.

"There's a fellow who'd draw an other million dollar gate if I could get him in the ring with Dempsey," Rickard said.

(End Chapter 8)
The next chapter will deal with the Dempsey-Firpo Fight.

DARKNESS WINS TWO GAMES

Fans who visited Spring Valley High School in expectation of witnessing scheduled basketball games between Spring Valley and Kingsman High boys' and girls' teams Friday night, sat patiently in the darkness for nearly two hours after the electric light system failed to function because of the heavy rain storm.

Shortly before the preliminary girls' game was scheduled to begin at 7:30, the lights went out and the gymnasium was thrown into darkness. Fans who faithfully kept their seats were doomed to disappointment as at 9 o'clock the games were officially called off since there were no indication the lighting system would be placed in operation that evening.

A few minutes after the gymnasium had been emptied, the lights went on again.

It is announced that the double-header will be played next Tuesday night with B. A. Wettig, Dayton, refereeing the contests.

ANTIOCH DIVISION B TEAM IS STILL TRYING TO HIT STRIDE

Although it has already lost its first two games by one-sided margins, Antioch College's Division "B" basketball team is said to represent the greatest basketball force the college ever had since the near-championship outfit of four years ago.

Therefore the showing of the "B" quintet so far has been a disappointment to Coach "Slim" Dawson, who prepared for a stiff schedule but expected it to materialize into one of the most successful seasons the Gold and Blue ever had.

Teegarden, a court veteran for four years, is back at a forward post, and Larry Seaman plays it down the other berth. Bill Boswick, late of the Ohio Edison team in the Springfield Industrial League, plays center, and is the outstanding star of the team. The two guards, Jim Barley and Jim Fyfe, are both experienced players.

Dawson also has strong reserve strength in Hoerr, Wilcox, Whitecarver, Confer, McLain and Sprague, all of whom are letter men.

Despite this fact the "B" quintet has dropped games to Capital University, 47 to 30, and to Rio Grande, 42 to 24. Wilmington is Antioch's next opponent at Wilmington January 24.

Because the new gymnasium is still in the course of construction, Antioch practices and plays its home games on the Bryan High School floor at Yellow Springs.

XENIA CENTRAL AND PIQUA TIED FOR LEADERSHIP IN LOOP RACE

Xenia and Piqua are tied for the leadership of the Miami Valley League, each with two victories and no defeats.

Xenia kept its league slate clean by swamping Troy 32 to 9 Friday night, while Piqua also recorded its second straight league victory at the expense of Miamisburg, 42 to 13, in a game on the Piqua floor. Piqua led 24 to 4 at the half.

Miamisburg as a result dropped from the select list of undefeated league teams and the three-point lead which it had held was reduced to a two-way dead-lock.

Sidney and Greenville, the remaining two teams, played non-league games Friday.

Piqua showed great strength against Miamisburg but Xenia, 1928 league champions, exhibited even greater ability in its victory over Troy.

Comparing the relative strength of Xenia and Piqua, the two foremost contenders for the title, Piqua defeated Troy at Troy 20 to 12 a week ago, while Xenia beat the Trojans 22 to 9, also at Troy.

This would indicate the Buccaneers are about fifteen points superior to Piqua, better on offense and better on defense, but you never can tell.

After two weeks of preliminary skirmishing the six league representatives will go into battle on three fronts next Friday night, January 25, meaning that three league games will be played.

Miamisburg invaded Xenia for a scheduled beating. Troy seems doomed to its third straight league defeat in a game at Sidney, while Piqua will undoubtedly defeat Greenville on the Greenville floor inasmuch as Miamisburg beat Greenville by one point. League standings follow:

Team	W.	L.	Pct.
Xenia	2	0	1.000
Piqua	2	0	1.000
Miamisburg	1	1	.500
Sidney	0	1	.000
Greenville	0	1	.000
Troy	0	2	.000

George Uhle, star Cleveland pitcher since 1919, went to the Detroit Tigers in exchange for Shortstop Jack Tavenner and Pitcher Kenneth Holloway. Although Uhle had a good well for two seasons it was him, but the acquisition of Tavenner plugged a yawning gap in their inner defense.

It took an outlay of five players for the Senators to bring Buddy Myer back from the Boston Red Sox, when only a little more than a year ago they were glad to get rid of him. To bring Buddy back to the fold the Senators gave Pitchers Horace Lisenbee and Milton Gaston, infielders Grant Gillis and Bob Reeves, and an outfielder, Elliot Bigelow, whom they had acquired from the Southern league.

Shortly after his re-election Heydler created a sensation by proposing a drastic change the rules, suggesting that nine-man teams be added to the new pitcher would act as batter for the pitcher, relieving the moundsman from hitting and base running responsibilities. This proposal met with disapproval by the American league heads.

But everybody knew that Fred might object for a little while, but not for long.

"But what in the devil will I wear?" he demanded to know, helplessly.

His face showed a comical bewilderment.

"With your figure, Fred," laughed Chet, "you'll have the choice of all the 'fat' parts."

"A Roman senator," chuckled Fred, already enthusiastic. "One of those togas ought to drape itself nicely over my stomach. And I could carry a spear!"

"You're getting early Rome mixed up with the Ziegfeld Follies!" laughed Byrd.

"I've got the grandest idea for my costume," trilled Tiny. "It's going to be a surprise!"

"This is the closed season against 'Little Bo-Peeps,'" said Fred, "even though you'll argue that you've got a perfectly good costume put away somewhere in mothballs. The last time you wore it, they said, 'Little Bo-Peep has lost her shape!' And my eye, that little pancake you wore over one eye. And you dragged along on a string a toy sheep over which one unfortunate gentleman fell—"

Here Fred whispered loudly to Chet, "And for no other reason."

Which reminded Chet of another one and to avoid the consequent embarrassment, the girls decided to go up to the storeroom, where Tiny said there were plenty of costumes for everybody.

"I think it's going to be a scrumptious party," said Pat, excitedly, as Tiny told them her plans.

On the way home Chet drew his car up at the curb where a cross-town line intersected Euclid Ave.

A few scattered newsboys were gathered at one corner playing penny ante, while the "Buildup edition" of the morning paper was standing in disorderly piles against the building.

"Let's see what the morning paper's got to say," said Chet, whistling for a newsboy.

The arc light above them threw enough light so he could see to read even the small print.

Chet started to read the article aloud.

"It's practically the same story, except he remarked, 'He glanced on through the article and Byrd had a feeling that he was deliberately omitting something.'

"You're not leaving something out?" asked Byrd, suspiciously.

"Here, let me take it a minute," they've listed thirty questions and we don't want to take time here to read them."

Chet said, queerly, his voice a little taut.

"Let me have that paper!" insisted Byrd.

He handed it to her.

And there, among the eight directors cited, was Larry's name, Lawrence Browning.

CHAPTER LIII

Byrd tossed all night long on her hard, lumpy bed. She couldn't put the thought of Larry out of her mind. The same picture repeated itself endlessly all night long—

Larry and Jack arrested and indicted by a grand jury on a charge of embezzlement and misappropriation of funds and tried before a jury and sent to the penitentiary.

The newspapers with their glaring headlines.

Toward morning Byrd could stand it no longer. Her thoughts bit into her soul like vicious animals. She got up and dressed. The room looked more threadbare and sordid than usual.

It was very early, so she washed out several pairs of stockings and sewed fresh collar and cuffs onto her blue silk which she wore at the bank. She manicured her nails until they looked like headlights.

In spite of her a worry appeared and reappeared like a single fly buzzing about her head.

She simply had to put Larry out of her mind. It was ridiculous to go on worrying about him. She knew she didn't give a whoop about him now! Of course she didn't!

As Byrd was finishing her breakfast with last night's newspaper stuck up on the dresser before her, she glanced out of the window.

There was Martin, sitting patiently in his car.

It was a funny old car, for Martin had assembled it himself. It looked like a poor relation with an incongruous gift or two from some rich relative. Battered fenders, but two elegant lamps which he called it the "Ashcan." On the radio which read: "Think how you'd look without any paint!"

Byrd had to smile. She felt years older than Martin, at least actually she supposed he was older than she.

Without realizing that she was hurrying or that she really intended to ride down with him, she put the newspaper aside and thrust her tray outside the door and got into her hat and coat.

She was downstairs in a few minutes.

She started determinedly down the street.

"Silly, you there," called Martin's cheerful voice. "What's your hurry?"

"I'm going to meet someone."

led Byrd. "I can't ride with you this morning, thank you."

"Room for three in my limousine," grinned Martin, starting his motor and driving slowly along the curb while he argued with her.

So in the end Byrd climbed into the car.

"I don't want you hanging around every morning waiting for me," she stormed. "People'll begin to talk. I just won't have it!"

"My, you can be peppy!" he smiled, admiringly. "But I like you that way!"

They quarreled all the way down town.

"You're cross as two sticks this morning," admitted Martin. "Something's worrying you," he added, with sudden penetration. "People always feel better if they talk about their troubles."

"You'll just add to mine if you keep talking to me," replied Byrd, crossly.

They were approaching the bank corner. Martin stopped his car without a word, and Byrd got out.

With her head high in the air, she trotted up the steps, never glancing back. But she didn't hear his car start off.

But in two minutes Martin was out of her mind and she was thinking of Larry and Jack.

She finished the letters piled high on her desk before she saw Mr. Polk.

"An awful mess Larry's in, isn't it?" she smiled wanly as she laid the letters on his desk.

Mr. Polk looked at her pointedly.

He observed the white face, dark eyes and heavy lines that might have been drawn with an indelible pencil around them.

"You're worrying more than the whole kit and caboodle of them," he said crisply. "Why do you let Larry's affairs continually upset you so? It's his funeral!"

"But I don't think Larry really deserved that last wallop," she said in a small voice.

"Perhaps he's been made a tool of by his good friend Jack Duncan," said Mr. Polk, contemptuously. "He's got to learn something about human nature before he gets any older. Well, he's out of town for a week, and there's no way of reaching him. I suppose he said he's going to keep moving."

A walk would do her more good than food, she decided, and since she had almost an hour left, she began walking down Euclid Ave.

She looked into the windows, lingering before the smart shops that displayed a single article, perhaps a winter suit designed by Paquin, of dark rich materials and trimmed in long-haired fox.

Pat and Chet had taken a small

What a strange lure the next season always had for women! But today Byrd stared at the beautiful models without a thrill.

Then she saw India coming toward her. She was smiling. She felt like turning quickly and walking in the other direction. Her mind raced ahead of her. Should she speak to India or shouldn't she? Then that thing which her father called "a mind of her own" made her decision for her.

She smiled at her and walked toward her so that India couldn't avoid her.

"How are you, India?" she asked, pleasantly.

It looked now as if it might have been India who hadn't cared to speak. She was embarrassed and showed it.

Byrd continued.

"I've been intending to come to your house to see you about some matters."

As Byrd talked on, the little quiver in her voice disappeared. She was really much more calm than India!

"From time to time you borrowed money from Larry to pay various bills," continued Byrd. "I have a list of them and you have, too, of course."

Byrd's eyes never left India's face.

"I won't need to itemize them for you. You remember the lamp, the frame for that oil painting, and the dress and the other things," her tone was light, "and I'd like a check for them as soon as you can conveniently send it. It was really my money that Larry was spending, I thought you ought to know."

India finally came to her senses, and a little snarl curled the corner of her mouth.

"Why, they were gifts from Larry, of course," she said in her husky, contemptuous voice.

"Well, that's a matter of opinion when the money was mine," answered Byrd. "He's up to his neck in debts now as you may know."

Byrd tried to look as hard as India did.

"Well, I'll talk the matter over with Mr. Polk," said Byrd, airily.

India was doing some rapid thinking. Byrd, surprised, rapid knew she was afraid that the matter would go to the head of her department at Simpson and Taylor.

Byrd continued down the street. She hadn't bothered to say good-bye. But a secret tremor of triumph raced up and down her back.

It was the first time in her life, no thorough second time, she had known she was afraid that the matter would go to the head of her department at Simpson and Taylor.

Pat telephoned during the afternoon to ask Byrd to have dinner with them that night.

Byrd agreed eagerly. She was in a terrible state of mind, and she was glad not to have to spend the evening alone in her room.

Pat and Chet had taken a small

apartment on a popular street car line.

Byrd had helped Pat buy the furniture and had planned the decorating, so it was cheery and cozy.

Byrd left the office early, so that she might help Pat with the dinner.

She found her in the tiny kitchen struggling grimly with the stuffed potatoes and a pie.

She looked like a defiant and angry child as Byrd appeared at the kitchen door, her hands on her hips and her feet far apart.

Her hair had all rumped up and the freckles had had their little harvest under the summer sun, running riot over her turned-up nose and straggling down her flushed cheeks. She had a snappy apron pinned with two enormous safety pins.

Pat was not cut out to be a housekeeper, thought Byrd.

She did everything with a slap and a bang, the quickest way being the only one that appealed to her.

"She just won't take time to sew on a single button," her mother had complained time and time again.

"I'll tell the world that I wish I hadn't gotten married," Pat said morosely. "How I hate this business of cooking! Everything's gone wrong today."

Byrd unpinned the greasy-looking apron for Pat had never been able to do anything around the kitchen without pouring everything down the front of her. The chances were she owned just one, a pinless manner.

"You go and get cleaned up," said Byrd. "You look like what the cat dragged in."

The tablecloth on the dining room table was spotty with the ghost of many meals, and the more substantial crumbs of the last one.

Byrd took it off and threw it into the clothes hamper.

She found some small dollies which Mrs. Hamilton had sent Pat, and set the table.

Then she finished getting dinner. Pat seemed a little dismayed at Chet's extravagant eulogies over the cooking.

"That kid's darned clever," he said, boastfully to Byrd, "last week she hardly knew how to cook eggs."

Chet never knew the truth about that meal. Pat's pleading eyes urged Byrd to keep mum.

They had a gay time during the dinner. Too gay, thought Byrd. Chet was trying to keep something from her.

"Where's the evening paper, Chet," she asked, after the dishes were washed and put away.

"Let's play a little three-handed bridge," he parried. "There's nothing new in the papers."

She saw the end of it sticking out from under the cushion of an overstuffed chair, where he had

She couldn't put the thought of Larry out of her mind. The same picture repeated itself endlessly all night long—Larry and Jack arrested and indicted by a grand jury on a charge of embezzlement and misappropriation of funds and tried before a jury and sent to the penitentiary.

The newspapers with their glaring headlines.

Toward morning Byrd could stand it no longer. Her thoughts bit into her soul like vicious animals. She got up and dressed. The room looked more threadbare and sordid than usual.

It was very early so she washed out several pairs of stockings and sewed fresh collars and cuffs onto her blue silk which she wore at the bank. She manuevered her nails until they looked like needles.

In spite of a worried appearance and a single line about her eyes, she simply had to put Larry out of her mind. It was ridiculous to go on worrying about him. She knew she didn't give a whoop about him now! Of course she didn't!

As Byrd was finishing her breakfast with last night's newspaper stuck up on the dresser before her, she glanced out of the window.

There was Martin, sitting patiently in his car.

It was a funny old car, for Martin had assembled it himself. It looked like a poor relation with an incongruous gift or two from some rich relative. Battered fenders but two elegant lamps. He called it the "Ashcan." On the radiator stood there dangled a card which read: "Think how you'd look without any paint!"

Byrd had to smile. She felt years older than Martin, yet, actually she supposed he was older than she.

Without realizing that she was hurrying or that she really intended to ride down with him, she put the newspaper aside and thrust her tray outside the door and got into her hat and coat.

She was downstairs in a few minutes.

Med Byrd. "I can't ride with you this morning, thank you."

"Room for three in my limousine," grinned Martin, starting his motor and driving slowly along the curb while he argued with her.

So in the end Byrd climbed into the car.

"I don't want you hanging around every morning waiting for me," she stormed. "People'll begin to talk. I just won't have it!"

"My, you can be peppy!" he smiled, admiringly. "But I like you that way!"

They quarreled all the way down town.

"You're cross as all two sticks this morning," admitted Martin. "Something's worrying you," he added, with sudden penetration. "People always feel better if they talk about their troubles."

"You'll just add to mine if you keep talking to me," replied Byrd, crossly.

They were approaching the bank corner. Martin stopped his car without a word, and Byrd got out.

With her head high in the air, she trotted up the steps, never glancing back. But she didn't hear his car start off.

But in two minutes Martin was out of her mind and she was thinking of Larry again.

She finished the letters piled high on her desk before she saw Mr. Polk.

"An awful mess Larry's in, isn't it?" he smiled wistfully as she laid the letters on his desk.

Mr. Polk looked at her pointedly. He observed the white face, tired eyes and heavy lines that might have been drawn with an indelible pencil around them.

"You're worrying more than the whole kit and caboodle of them," he said crisply. "Why do you let Larry's affairs continually upset you so? It's his funeral!"

"But I don't think Larry really deserved that last wallop," she said in a small voice.

"Perhaps he's been made a tool of by his good friend Jack Duncan," said Mr. Polk, contemptuously.

"He's got to learn something about human nature before he gets any older. Well, he's out of town for a week, and there's no way of reaching him, I suppose."

He said he's going to keep moving pretty fast for a while until he gets his stock sold off."

Byrd went to the "Coffee Club" for lunch, but she barely tasted the soup and salad she had carried to her table. She shoved them aside finally, to the astonishment of the waitress who was removing trays and empty dishes, and left.

A walk would do her more good than food, she decided, and since she had almost an hour left, she began walking down Euclid Ave.

She looked into the windows, lingering before the smart shops that displayed a single article, perhaps a winter suit designed by Paquin, of dark rich materials and trimmed in long-haired fox.

CHAPTER LIII

Byrd tossed all night long on her hard, lumpy bed.

She couldn't put the thought of Larry out of her mind. The same picture repeated itself endlessly all night long—Larry and Jack arrested and indicted by a grand jury on a charge of embezzlement and misappropriation of funds and tried before a jury and sent to the penitentiary.

The newspapers with their glaring headlines.

Toward morning Byrd could stand it no longer. Her thoughts bit into her soul like vicious animals. She got up and dressed. The room looked more threadbare and sordid than usual.

It was very early so she washed out several pairs of stockings and sewed fresh collars and cuffs onto her blue silk which she wore at the bank. She manuevered her nails until they looked like needles.

In spite of a worried appearance and a single line about her eyes, she simply had to put Larry out of her mind. It was ridiculous to go on worrying about him. She knew she didn't give a whoop about him now! Of course she didn't!

As Byrd was finishing her breakfast with last night's newspaper stuck up on the dresser before her, she glanced out of the window.

There was Martin, sitting patiently in his car.

It was a funny old car, for Martin had assembled it himself. It looked like a poor relation with an incongruous gift or two from some rich relative. Battered fenders but two elegant lamps. He called it the "Ashcan." On the radiator stood there dangled a card which read: "Think how you'd look without any paint!"

Byrd had to smile. She felt years older than Martin, yet, actually she supposed he was older than she.

Without realizing that she was hurrying or that she really intended to ride down with him, she put the newspaper aside and thrust her tray outside the door and got into her hat and coat.

She was downstairs in a few minutes.

What a strange lure the next season always had for women! But today Byrd stared at the beautiful models without a thrill.

Then she saw India coming toward her. She was startled, she felt like turning quickly and walking in the other direction. Her mind raced ahead of her. Should she speak to India or shouldn't she? Then that thing which her father called "a mind of her own" made her decision for her.

She smiled at her and walked toward her so that India couldn't avoid her.

"How are you, India?" she asked, pleasantly.

It looked now as if it might have been India who hadn't cared to speak. She was embarrassed and showed it.

Byrd continued.

"I've been intending to come to your house to see you about some matters."

As Byrd talked on, the little quiver in her voice disappeared. She was really much more calm than India.

"From time to time you borrowed money from Larry to pay various bills," continued Byrd. "I have a list of them and you have, too, of course."

Byrd's eyes never left India's face.

"I won't need to itemize them for you. You remember the lamp, the frame for that oil painting, and the dress and the other things," her tone was light, and "I'd like a check for them, as soon as you can conveniently send it. It was really my money that Larry was spending. I thought you ought to know."

India finally came to her senses, and a little sneer curled the corner of her mouth.

"Why, they were gifts from Larry, of course," she said in her husky, contemptuous voice.

"Well, that's a matter of opinion when the money was mine," answered Byrd. "He's up to his neck in debts now as you may know."

Pat tried to look as hard as India did.

"Well, I'll talk the matter over with Mr. Polk," said Byrd, airily.

India was doing some rapid thinking, Byrd surmised. Byrd knew she was afraid that the matter would go to the head of her department at Simpson and Taylor.

Byrd continued down the street, but she didn't bother to say goodbye. But a secret tremor of triumph raced up and down her back.

It was the first time in her life, no the second time, she had had the courage to do what she knew she ought to do even though it took every ounce of will power.

Pat telephoned during the afternoon to ask Byrd to have dinner with them that night.

Byrd agreed eagerly. She was in a terrible state of mind, and she was glad not to have to spend the evening alone in her room.

Pat and Chet had taken a small

apartment on a popular street car line.

Byrd had helped Pat buy the furniture and had planned the decorating, so it was cheery and cozy.

Byrd left the office early, so that she might help Pat with the dinner.

She found her in the tiny kitchen struggling grimly with the stuffed potatoes and a pie.

She looked like a defiant and angry child as Byrd appeared at the kitchen door, her hands on her hips and her feet far apart.

Her hair was all rumpled up and the freckles had had their little harvest under the summer sun, running riot over her turned-up nose and straggling down her flushed cheeks. She had a smudgy apron pinned with two enormous safety pins.

Pat was not cut out to be a housekeeper, thought Byrd.

She did everything with a slap and a bang, the quickest way being the only one that appealed to her.

"She just won't take time to sew on a single button," her mother had complained time and time again.

"I'll tell the world that I wish I hadn't gotten married," Pat said morosely. "How I hate this business of cooking! Everything's gone wrong today!"

Byrd upturned the greasy-looking apron. Pat had never been able to do anything around the kitchen without pouring everything down the front of her. The chances were she owned just one.

She pinned it about her in a businesslike manner.

"You go and get cleaned up," said Byrd. "You look like what the cat dragged in."

The tablecloth on the dining room table was spotty with the ghosts of many meals, and the more substantial crumbs of the last one.

Byrd took it off and threw it into the clothes hamper.

She found some small dollies which Mrs. Hamilton had sent Pat, and set the table.

Then she finished getting dinner. Pat seemed a little dismayed at Chet's extravagant eulogies over the cooking.

Chet never knew the truth about that meal. Pat's pleading eyes urged Byrd to keep mum.

They had a gay time during the dinner. Too gay, thought Byrd. Chet was trying to keep something from her.

Where's the evening paper, Chet? she asked, after the dishes were washed and put away.

"Let's play a little three-handed bridge," he parried. "There's nothing new in the papers."

She saw the end of it sticking out from under the cushion of an overstuffed chair, where he had

YELLOW SPRINGS NURSE GAINS FAME FIGHTING EPIDEMICS IN NEAR EAST

A record of the work of Miss Alice Carr of Yellow Springs in Mesopotamia is contained in the annual report of the Near East Relief recently presented to its board of trustees in New York.

Miss Carr has become famous in the Near East as a fighter of epidemics. She cleaned up malaria in Corbala, Greece, when 3,000 refugee children who had been taken there from Turkey at the time of the deportations came down with the disease. She organized clinics in Smyrna that helped to reduce the infant mortality rate from seventy to one per cent. Previous to her service with Near East Relief she was for two years with the A. E. F. in France and with the Red Cross in Serbia, Poland and Czechoslovakia.

Last year Miss Carr organized welfare work in Mesopotamia, according to the report of her organization, that treated 900 children a month and instructed mothers in the treatment of many more and ministered to 1500 persons in five villages who were stricken with malaria during the summer when the temperature was 120 in the shade. A total of 6,802 children and 2,531 mothers were aided from May to October with a total of 15,150 treatments. When Miss Carr left Mesopotamia for the island of Syria in the Aegean Sea, where she now supervises the medical work in the Near East Relief vocational school, she organized a committee of American and British residents of Mosul who supervise the work which is carried on by a staff of native nurses whom she trained.

Miss Carr claims that the most important phase of the work of her organization at present lies in the various problems and among the thousands of children who have been outplacced and gathered from its institutions rather than among those who are still in the orphanages. The tremendous outplacings during the past few years, which during 1927 and 1928 alone numbered 33,403, has entailed a considerable outlay in the matter of subsidies for maintenance, medical care and above all for economic adjustment in countries which have not yet recovered from the effects of war, but it is of paramount importance in order that the children may not revert to the refugee class once more.

"Bits 'O Life from the By-ways", is the way Hugh Fuller characterizes the entertainment which he is to give on the Caesarcreek lyceum course January 22. This writer, humorist and impersonator uses costumes and make-up to introduce a series of characters that bring plenty of laughs, but at the same time carry enough sentiment to keep the heartstrings vibrating. Every story and poem used by Mr.

Fuller in his program is original. It is probable that Hugh Fuller's greatest fame has come through his impersonation of "Hen" Hoskins, the village philosopher. He also gives a fine impersonation of "Sammy," the grocer's boy, who reveals the tribulations of a bashful courtship.

Attention of the Redpath Bureau was first attracted to Mr. Fuller by his frequent successful appearances before clubs and conventions in Ohio and adjoining states. One appearance before a state meeting of Kiwanians led to seven other engagements. A visit to Sandusky, Ohio, before one of the civic clubs, resulted in eight other engagements.

Smoothness

Never Before Achieved in a Low-Priced Automobile

Of all the exceptional performance qualities resulting from the advanced design of the new Chevrolet Six, none is more impressive than its remarkably smooth operation.

Although the new six-cylinder motor develops 32% more power with correspondingly higher speed and faster acceleration... although it delivers better than twenty miles to the gallon of gasoline——its outstanding feature of performance is a degree of smoothness never before achieved in any low-priced automobile.

To achieve such remarkable performance in a car of such low price, Chevrolet spent years in development work. Over 100 different engines were designed, built and subjected to over a million miles of testing at the General Motors Proving Ground before the present motor was adopted. The new power plant has many unusual features, such as the new acceleration pump, the new gasoline pump and filter, and the new automatic lubrication of the rocker arms.

The four-wheel brakes have been newly designed to assure positive, quiet action. Steering has been made easier. And the new Fisher bodies with their new lines, new colors, adjustable driver's seats and new appointments represent new heights of style, distinction, comfort and value.

We extend you a cordial invitation to see and drive the new Chevrolet Six. We believe it an experience that every motorist should have—and we want you to know how finely the new Chevrolet Six is built and how smoothly it performs!

YELLOW SPRINGS NURSE GAINS FAME FIGHTING EPIDEMICS IN NEAR EAST

A record of the work of Miss Alice Carr of Yellow Springs in Mesopotamia is contained in the annual report of the Near East Relief recently presented to its board of trustees in New York.

Miss Carr has become famous in the Near East as a fighter of epidemics. She cleaned up malaria in Corinth, Greece, when 3,000 refugee children who had been taken there from Turkey at the time of the deportations came down with the disease. She organized clinics in Smyrna that helped to reduce the infant mortality rate from seventy to one per cent. Previous to her service with Near East Relief she was for two years with the E. F. in France and with the Red Cross in Serbia, Poland and Czechoslovakia.

Last year Miss Carr organized welfare work in Mesopotamia according to the report of her organization, that treated 900 children a month and instructed mothers in the treatment of many more and ministered to 1500 persons in five villages who were stricken with malaria during the summer when the temperature was 120 in the shade. A total of 6,892 children and 2,531 mothers were aided from May to October with a total of 15,180 treatments. When Miss Carr left Mesopotamia for the island of Syria in the Aegean Sea, where she now supervises the medical work in the Near East Relief vocational school, she organized a committee of American and British residents of Mosul who supervise the work which is carried on by a staff of native nurses whom she trained. Miss Carr claims that the most important phase of the work of her organization at present lies in the various problems and among the thousands of children who have been orphaned and gathered from its institutions rather than among those who are still in the orphanages. The tremendous cupping during the past few years, which during 1927 and 1928 alone numbered 33,403, has entailed a considerable outlay in the matter of subsidies for maintenance, medical care and above all for economic adjustment in countries which have not yet recovered from the effects of war, but it is of paramount importance in order that the children may not revert to the refugee class once more.
